15,000 IN RED CROSS PARADE

Thousands Cheer Marchers in Great Drive to Raise Fund of $100,000,000

Fifteen thousand men, women and children marched through the streets of Boston today in celebration of the opening of the $100,000,000 Red Cross drive.

With banners, flags and variegated costumes forming a brilliant color scheme, they moved through lanes of cheering spectators, testifying to their appreciation of the work done by "The Greatest Mother of Them All."

The weather was ideal, without a cloud in the sky, as though nature were attempting to assist in the mightiest movement for the alleviation of suffering the world has ever known.

CHEERS ALL ALONG LINE.

The parade started at 1 o'clock, but long before that line brongas had gathered along the line of march. The paraders, representing many nationalities and creeds, were given a practically continuous ovation, and the many features were cheered again and again.

These features included floats depicting various Red Cross activities, khaki-uniformed women chauffeurs driving wounded Canadian soldiers, the Junior Red Cross, units of foreign-born citizens, and members of

39 IN NEW CASUALTY REPORT

12 New England Names, 7 Men Missing, 3 Wounded, Only 2 Deaths

Twelve more New England names were added today to the roll of American casualties in France, in a total of thirty-nine published by the War Department.

Of these, seven men are reported as missing. These are probably more of the prisoners taken by the Germans, the names of whom have been coming as fast as it was assured the men would not return to their commands.

Only two New England deaths are given, one from wounds and another of disease. Three are slightly wounded.

Conspicuous in the record is the name of Miss Lucy N. Fletcher, a Boston nurse, whose home was in Concord, N. H. Miss Fletcher succumbed to disease while succoring the wounded. She is the first New England woman heralded as a martyr to the cause of world democracy yet mentioned in the casualty lists.

Among the slightly wounded are two from Greater Boston. Private Edward R. Woodfin, Company C, 101st Infantry, No. 18 Pratt street, Allston, and Corporal Herbert H. H. Gillis, Jr., Company E, 101st Infantry, 146 Sycamore street, Somerville.

U. S. Aviator Shoots Down 2 Hun Planes in One Minute

By International News Service.

Washington, May 18.—Two German airplances were shot down within one minute by Captain Peterson of the American aviation corps, General Pershing reported in his daily communique to the War Department today. In Lorraine, patrolling was active, says the communique, and an increase in artillery fire was noted. The text of the communique was:

"Headquarters American Expeditionary Forces, May 16.—Section A—In Lorraine patrolling was active and there was again increase of artillery fire. Otherwise the day was quiet at point occupied by our troops.

"Section B—Particulars concerning bringing down hostile airplanes at about noon May 15, previously reported, when aviators were waiting for French general who was coming to confer decorations, are as follows:

"While waiting, Captain Peterson made an ascent and encountered two German planes and shot down both within one minute, firing sixty shots at first and fifteen at second. First plane burst to flames before hitting ground and wings of second were seen to crumple up when nearing earth. No definite information concerning third hostile plane reported brought down.

"It is now determined that our airplane reported yesterday as having accidentally fallen within our lines north of Toul was shot down, probably by anti-aircraft guns."

WILSON REVIEWS 75,000 IN PARADE

By DAVID M. CHURCH.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

New York, May 18.—President Woodrow Wilson today set a glowing example for the patriots of the nation, by devoting his time to the $100,000,000 drive of the American Red Cross.

The nation's chief executive, accompanied by Mrs. Wilson and Rear-Admiral Grayson, reviewed a great parade this afternoon, and tonight at the Metropolitan Opera House he will deliver a speech in support of the great drive which was inaugurated today in cities throughout the country.

The President spent the greater part of the morning preparing the address he is to give tonight. He will call on the nation for further sacrifices to win the war against Germany, and his speech is expected to prepare the people of the United States for the sacrifices which they may be called upon to make in the future.

The parade here today was the largest of its kind ever attempted in the Metropolis. More than 75,000 marchers, including 20,000 women, were in line, and the long column was augmented by forty bands as it wended its way down Fifth avenue.

SPAULDING IS FREED BY ARMY COURT

By WILLIAM FLYNN.

Camp Devens Ayer May 18.—Private John A. Spaulding former professor of German at Worcester Polytechnic Institute, who was court-martialed for alleged unpatriotic utterances while a candidate at the third officers' training camp, was found not guilty and acquitted, according to the approved verdict of the court-mirtial published here today.

During the trial Spaulding admitted making some of the statements contained in the specifications in the course of academic discussions of international affairs with other college men who were also candidates at the school, but stated that he had not intention of being disloyal.

Attorney E. A. Whitman of Boston, Spaulding's counsel, argued that the defendant's statements did not constitute an offence and that the court had no right to try him.

Lieutenant John B. Cummings of Fall River, judge advocate of the court, maintained that Spaulding's statement may have had a demoralizing effect upon other men in the service. The judge advocate was sustained in his contention by the court and the trial proceeded.

The former German professor, however, was exonerated by the court on both the charge and specifications and the prisoner has been sent to duty with the 206th company of depot brigade.

It was stated at division headquarters today that Spaulding had not been recommended as a candidate to attend the fourth officers' training camp.

SINN FEIN LEADERS JAILED

Prof. De Valera, Countess Markievicz and Arthur Griffiths Among Prisoners

By International News Service.

London, May 18.—Thirteen leaders of the Sinn Feiners in Ireland, including the Countess Markievicz (who was unplicated in the Dublin uprising), Professor DeValera (a member of Parliament), and others equally prominent have been arrested, said a dispatch from Dublin to the Evening News today.

Those arrested in the Irish capital were Dr. Dillon, Arthur Griffiths, the Countess Markievicz, DeValera and a Sinn Fein leader named Cosgrove.

The Freeman's Journal (of Dublin) says that conscription will be put into effect in Ireland under cover of the revelations that are now being made.

Arrests were made in different parts of Ireland, but were made simultaneously. All followed the revelation that German propaganda was being liberally distributed in Ireland.

The Star, in referring to the matter, said:

"The developments indicate that conscription will be applied to Ireland immediately."

In his proclamation the Lord Lieutenant stated that it had come to the knowledge of the government that subjects of the British crown in Ireland had entered into treasonable communication with the enemy.

Call for Volunteers May Make Conscription in Ireland Unnecessary

By FLOYD McGRIFF.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, May 18.—Faced with the possibility of a revolt in South Ireland, following the arrest of thirteen leaders of the Sinn Feiners, if conscription is enforced, the new lord lieutenant, Lord French, has issued a proclamation calling for voluntary enlistments.

The proclamation, it was said, was issued "in hope that it would not be necessary to resort to compulsion" to gain Irish recruits.

In a previous proclamation the lord lieutenant had stated that it had come to the attention of the government that certain subjects of King George in Ireland had entered into treasonable communication with the Germans.

The government is attempting to have Ireland's quota in the empire's army brought in its proper strength without recourse to conscription.

The lord lieutenant's announcement was the first intimation that abandonment of the Irish conscription plan was even remotely possible. While it was issued ostensibly to gain recruits and block the German-Sinn Fein plot, it is considered certain that it will result in a lessening of the animosity aroused by the possibility of enforced war service.

"Meanwhile," says the Chronicle's Dublin correspondent, "the danger of the enforcement of conscription may be finally and definitely put aside."

The Freeman's Journal (of Dublin) says:

"While it is possible that a few foolish persons may have conspired to invoke German aid, the Irish people, notwithstanding the provocation of England, are not pro-German."

By International News Service.

"We want nothing but a place in the sun. Our agreements for the future have not been aggressive in character. We are firm in the confidence that events in the West bring us nearer the end."

The Chancellor also commented at length upon the "improvements in the relations with Hungary."

London, May 18.—Heavy cannonading developed during the night in the Givenchy and Robecq sectors of the Flanders battle front, the war office announced today. Big German guns were active also in the Lens and Hazebrouck areas.

"There was considerable artillery activity during the night on both sides between Givenchy and Robecq.

"German artillery has shown some activity in the sectors of Lens, Hazebrouck and Ypres.

"Aside from this there is nothing else to report."

The growing intensity of the gun fire in the Arras-Givenchy sector, the only stretch of the front where the British fire lines have not been changed since March 21, causes the

While the new vessel was not subjected to the effects of an actual torpedo, it was reported that following an explosion such as would result from a torpedo, she "would be little better than a water-logged derelict." Even if she remained afloat, salvage would be difficult, it was found. The board which made the inspection and submitted the report was headed by Rear Admiral Winterhalter.

Connecticut Boy Among Missing Was 14 When He Enlisted

Connecticut's youngest war hero, Private Edward J. Murray, of Company C, 102nd United States Infantry, who is only fifteen years old, and believed also to be the youngest enlisted man from New England, is among those who are reported missing in action in France. He is a brother of Mrs. Arthur J. Neville, of No. 263 William street, Middletown, Ct., and would have been sixteen years old the 21st of this month.

On the 28th of April he was cited for exceptional bravery, being mentioned as having shown great courage under fire. He enlisted March 31, 1917, and at that time he was only fourteen years old.

Private Murray is very tall for his age and looks older than he really is. When he was examined he was found under weight. He was sent home, but with a determination to gain the necessary weight he ate heartily and rested and then presented himself and made the necessary weight. He was assigned to C Company of the 102d U. S. Infantry and later went with the unit to France.

Private John J. Milan of South Boston, also reported missing in action, is a stretcher bearer with the 104th Ambulance Company. He was transferred to this company after arriving in France from the 21st Field Hospital Corps.

Milan is scarcely nineteen, but fighting blood flows in his veins. He enlisted in the 2d Massachusetts Field Hospital Corps at the time of the outbreak of the trouble with Mexico, although he was only sixteen at the time. He passed himself off as being older and on account of his height and solid build the word was not questioned.

He is one of two brothers in the service, the other, George A. Milan, being in France as a member of the same regiment. They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick J. Milan of No. 925 East Broadway, South Boston.

The young private who is missing was born in South Boston and attended the schools there. He was graduated from the Oliver Hazard Perry School.

15,000 PARADE FOR RED CROSS $100,000,000

various organizations, all of whom swung along to the inspiring music of many bands and drum corps.

The customary Red Cross first-aid stations were dotted along the line of march, but they were not needed. On the contrary, the marchers seemed far less fatigued than those who took part in the recent Liberty Loan parade. Gazing at the smiling, enthusiastic faces, it was hard for the spectators to visualize pain-racked soldiers on the battlefields of Europe, or terror-stricken refugees, to both of whom the Red Cross stands as a divine emblem.

REVIEWED BY OFFICIALS.

The parade started on time at the corner of Newbury and Arlington streets, and to the accompaniment of stirring band music, proceeded down Beacon street. At the State House it was reviewed by Lieutenant-Governor Coolidge and other dignitaries, both civil and military. It was again reviewed at City Hall by Mayor Peters, and then continued to Washington street, to Bromfield to Tremont to Boylston to Park square, where it was disbanded.

At Park Square was the reviewing stand of Chief Marshal Alston Burr, who is also chairman of the Metropolitan division of the Red Cross.

The National colors and the Red Cross flag were carried at the head of parade by a special color guard. Directly after the guard were Mrs. Cora Ely, the parade manager; General Bancroft and Eliot Wadsworth, the vice-president of the national organization. Every individual marching carried a small Red Cross flag.

The parade was made up of five division, each one of which signified one of the activities of the Red Cross.

One of the most interesting features was the Red Cross float, in the headquarters division. This float carried the heads of the various departments, which included the canteen service, which is doing such splendid work here and abroad; the educational department, which is in charge of all classes, teaching surgical dressings, first aid and home nursing; the home service section, information department, supply department, supply department, surgical dressings department and volunteer service bureau.

GARDEN SCENE ON FLOAT.

The beauty of some of the floats was enhanced by the fact that all those who rode were wearing the official costumes of the branches they represented.

One of the floats had a garden scene, showing the work that farm units are doing. Another to represent humanity had a Red Cross nurse with a child in her arms.

One of the most impressive of all the divisions was the Womans' Volunteer Motor Detachment. The fifty members of this detachment wore their new uniforms, consisting of oxford grey coats and riding breeches, leggin puttees and shoes, white waists with black ties and sporty caps with a Red Cross in front. Each of the volunteers who made up this division drove her own car, and carried some of the wounded Canadian soldiers who are here speaking in the interests of the Red Cross drive. At the head of this division was Mrs. Odin Roberts, its commandant.

In this same division was a Red Cross ambulance driven by Mrs. George Johnson, in which a graduate nurse rode. There was also a delivery wagon, carrying surgical supplies and cases of dressings.

FOREIGN-BORN CITIZENS.

Another division which illustrated better than anything else could the variety of work that the Red Cross accomplishes was the All-American section. This included units of foreign born citizens, arranged alphabetically, according to their nationality.

The Junior Red Cross, under the direction of Father Hickey, and made up of about 750 members of the Metropolitan Chapter, included girl scouts, camp fire girls and other junior organizations.

The Waltham division contained about five hundred, and the Winthrop chapter included among other attractions little nine-year-old Elizabeth Magee, it's youngest knitter, riding in a pony cart.

BELGIAN HOSPITALS ARE BOMBED, 10 DEAD, 20 HURT

London, May 18.—German airmen bombed Belgian hospitals in Calais on Thursday night, killing ten persons and wounding twenty others, said a Belgian official statement received from Havre today. Adjutant De Meulemeester of the Belgian army brought down his tenth German machine in flames near the Houthoulst Forest (Belgium).

MISS FLETCHER, DEAD AT FRONT, BOSTON NURSE

First Woman in Casualty Lists

Radcliffe Graduate, Was at Massachusetts General

The name of Miss Lucy N. Fletcher, a nurse with the Massachusetts General Hospital unit, was contained in today's casualty list from the War Department.

Miss Fletcher, a Radcliffe graduate, died from spinal meningitis, and in giving her life obtained the honor of being the first woman to have her name appear on an official list from General Pershing.

Miss Alice Binet, an aunt, of No. 246 North Main street, Concord, N. H., received a letter from the nurse a short time ago in which she spoke optimistically of her chances for recovery.

Miss Fletcher was the daughter of Mrs. Nettie Fletcher, now of London, and was born in that city thirty years ago. She came to this country while quite young and lived with her parents in Concord. The girl attended the Concord High School and graduated from Radcliffe in the class of 1910.

After leaving college she was connected with the Associated Charities in Boston and then spent a year with her mother in London. Later Miss Fletcher took a three years' course at the Massachusetts General Hospital and became night supervisor. Last July she sailed for France with the hospital unit and was located at Base Hospital No. 6. She had been ill for some months before her death.

A sister, Miss Hilda Fletcher, also a Radcliffe graduate, is now at the Massachusetts General Hospital. Another sister is the wife of Professor Prince of the New Hampshire State College and a brother, Vivian, is at one of the forts in Boston harbor.

Brantling, Swedish Socialist, Supports Wilson's War Views

By International News Service.

Paris, May 18.—Dr. Brantling, the famous Swedish Socialist leader, comes warming to the support of President Wilson's war views in an interview given to the Stockholm correspondent of the Temps.

Dr. Brantling said that the present time was inopportune for the starting of an International Socialist peace conference, as "cannon are now being employed to settle the disputes of nations."

Furthermore, added the Socialist leader, the Russian Bolsheviki refuse every proposition that is put up to them, including President Wilson's proposals. Bolshevikism is described as a great peril for socialism, being called a "caricature of real socialism."

"The Bolsheviki" said Dr. Brantling, "wish to realize by decree an economic transformation of society which has to be brought about by slow evolution. Bolshevikism would lead to catastrophe in any democracy.

"German Socialists now declare that the war should be decided by the crushing of the allies with cannon. They remained silent in the Reichstag when confronted with the Brest-Litovsk peace situation. The attitude taken by the London Socialists seems best of all, as they enlarged and defined the proposals put out by President Wilson."

SHOW WHAT IS DOING IN DYEING INDUSTRY

A display of dyeings of American colors vs. German colors is the feature of an exhibit by the National Aniline & Chemical Company, which has been transferred from the New York textile show to the "Made in U. S. A. exhibit" now in progress at the Jordan Marsh Company's store. It demonstrates the work of the American dye industry. The exhibit also includes a laboratory unit in full operation, a large exhibit of cloths, yarns, leather and finished articles dyed with national colors. The "Made in U. S. A. exhibit" runs to May 25.

HEAVY GUNFIRE ALONG WIDE BATTLE FRONT

belief that General Otto Von Below's army will be called on to strike against the defences of Bethune Souches and the St. Eloi coal fields.

MACKENSEN MAY LEAD.

At the same time the Germans would attempt to eradicate the salient between the Lys and Somme Rivers (the Arras salient). General von Below's army has not suffered heavily having participated only in the abortive thrust in the Arras zone early in April, which was decisively stopped. Then the Germans switched their pressure northward against Armentieres and the sector held by the Portuguese.

General von Arnim's army group had to provide the shock troops for the attack on the northern end of the line. The reports that Field Marshal von Mackensen has taken over command of von Buelow's army group are current. If they are true, they indicate that attacks between Arras and Givenchy would be of a weighty nature and not mere demonstrations.

Von Mackensen would be called to the western front only as a last resort, because of his old feud with von Hindenburg and the Crown Prince.

Aerial observation, however, proves that the bulk of the German reserves are still in the area between Mareuil and Albert. If the enemy should attempt a turning movement towards the channel coast, using Von Sutier's army on the Somme, Von Below's forces undoubtedly would be required for a direct frontal attack between Arras and Givenchy, while Von Arnim's forces might be called in to hammer the Belgians near the North Sea.

Unusual artillery activity has just been reported from the sector of Nieuport. A terrific offensive, more powerful than that of March, would not surprise military critics. The longer the Germans wait before striking, the more men the allies can put in the field—consisting not only of new divisions that have never been used, but of divisions of rested men.

It is believed that the Germans would not have risked their whole future by launching their offensive in March if they had not feared the striking power of the Americans.

HEAVY GERMAN LOSSES.

The heavy German losses in the offensive are indicated by the number of withdrawn divisions. Captured documents have proved that the Germans kept divisions in the first line until they were actually shattered, hesitating to release reserves. Since March 21 the Germans have used 206 divisions.

One hundred and twenty-six divisions were used on the Lys (Flanders) front alone. The two hundred and eighth division lost 70 per cent. of its men and seven other German divisions lost 50 per cent. It was the fifth German division that crossed the Somme in the first three days of the offensive storming Ham and Bris. But it had to be withdrawn on account of exhaustion on March 26.

ALLIED AVIATORS IN HUGE DRIVE AT HUNS

A concentrated allied air drive in France is holding up the German field forces in their preparations for renewed assault.

Latest official statements from the British and French War Offices today emphasized the number and severity of these air raids and the damage done to strategic points back of the German lines.

In a constant succession of raids since last Tuesday night French and British aviators have dropped more than 140 tons of bombs.

These devastating projectiles were hurled on railway stations, communication points, airdromes, munition depots and billets.

Munition depots were exploded. Railway stations and airdromes were set on fire.

The German aviators seemed unable to stem the furious onslaught. French fliers brought down four enemy airplanes Thursday and damaged three others.

On the same day British aviators shot down thirty hostile machines and drove five more out of control, while the British anti-aircraft gunners brought down two German planes and forced two others to land behind the allied lines. Only five British machines were reported missing after this raiding day.

The French squadrons ranged over Picardy for forty-five and fifty miles, scattering bomb-dropping on St. Quentin, Nesle, Ham and other points in that region.

British bomb-droppers worked farther north, especially over Lille and Douai. But one British squadron dropped bombs on railway stations at Chaulnes, which would make them intersect the cross-country flight of the French fliers.

The British fliers also went far north of the western battle front, flying over the Belgian border and bombing in the neighborhood of the big docks at Bruges.

Today's London report on the British end of the combined aerial onslaught said:

"There was great aerial activity on the 16th. Our observation balloons accomplished a large amount of registration for the artillery, and reported movements of the enemy in forward areas.

"Our airplanes carried out long distance reconnaissances, doing artillery work, bombing, photographing and fighting throughout the day.

23 TONS OF BOMBS.

"Over twenty-three tons of bombs were dropped on important railway centres, airdromes and billets behind the enemy's lines.

"There was intense fighting early in the morning and again in the evening. Thirty hostile machines were shot down and five others were driven down out of control. In addition, two German planes were brought down by our anti-aircraft guns and two other hostile machines were compelled to land behind our lines. The occupants were captured.

"Five of our machines are missing.

"During the night our air fleets dropped ten and one-half tons of bombs on different targets, including railway stations at Lille, Douai and Chaulnes (all in northern France but behind the German lines) and billets in the neighborhood of Bapaume, Peronne, Rosieres and the docks at Bruges (Belgium.)

"Enemy night fliers were active also. One Gotha was compelled to land behind our lines and the crew was captured."

THE FRENCH REPORT.

The night report of the Paris War Office features air activities since Tuesday night thus:

"Our aviation squadrons have been active. On Tuesday night a number of our aviators participated in bombardments of the zone occupied by the enemy, 36,000 kilograms of projectiles being dropped on railway stations, communications and airdromes at St. Quentin, Jussy, Flavy Le Martel, Nesles and Ham. Munition depots were exploded at Nesles and large fires were observed at Oulchy and Chatelet. The railway station at Nesles was burned.

"On the following day 10,000 kilograms were dropped on the same region and 10,000 kilograms on the regions of Amagne, Longueny and Mont Cornet. On May 16 four enemy airplanes were shot down and three others were gravely damaged.

"On the night of May 16 railway stations and German cantonments at Chaulnes, Roye, Nesles and St Quentin received 25,000 kilograms of projectiles and munition depots were destroyed. Fires and explosions were caused at other points."

FELL LIKE ADAM IN EDEN'S GARDEN, SAYS MAN MISS LUSK LOVED

TEMPTED, ROBERTS ASSERTS CAUTIOUS DOCTOR SAMSON

Defendant's Wrath Blazes Out in Hot Denial at Man's Charge

Beatrice Fairfax Says He Didn't "Yield Lightly to Entreaties of His Delilah"

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Waukesha, Wis., May 18.—"The woman tempted me and I fell," was the plea of Dr. David Robertson, on the witness stand at the trial of Grace Lusk, for the murder of his wife, Mary Newman Roberts.

It was the big sensation of the trial to date. The atmosphere of the courtroom grew electric, the crowd gasped, then they looked forward like people looking at a crucial scene flashed on the screen at the movies.

In the witness chair sat Dr. Roberts, scared-looking and furtive, his little twinkling black eyes batting with nervousness.

"She asked me if I loved her, and I replied, 'Miss Lusk, I honor and respect you, but—marriage—no.'

"What did she say then?" asked Walter Corrigan, of the defense.

"She said," answered Roberts, never glancing in Miss Lusk's direction, "that she wanted more than that; she wanted to go on a trip to Chicago and have a good time."

Miss Lusk, who had heard the first of the doctor's testimony with twitching hands and heaving breast, sprang to her feet and protested in a high pitched voice: "It isn't true, oh, it isn't true."

LIMP IN FATHER'S ARMS.

Judge Lusk thundered with his gravel, the woman on trial seemed to sway for a moment or two, then she crumpled into a heap in her old father's arms. He soothed and stroked her as if she were a little child, and not ten feet away sat the horse doctor endeavoring to clear himself in the terms of a model husband.

In varying instances he related how he told Miss Lusk that he was married. O, a very cautious Samson was this, and one that did not yield lightly to the entreaties of Delilah.

Even when he confessed that he had and was guilty of a violation of the Mann act, the whole trend of his testimony was that there was no escaping the woman. He was the victim, not she.

The jury fairly stared at him, and the pupils of her eyes were distended. There was no shred of the old love in this appearance.

The little high school girls and the "sub-debs" that flock to this trial hateless and with rows of ribbons in their hair that is often turned up yet, gaped at the scene.

"SO THIS WAS LOVE."

"So this was love, and the man went smack back on the woman like he would on a horse," gasped half aloud. "Well, catch me."

In the meantime, Dr. Roberts, still referring to the role of lover, was identifying various love letters that he and Miss Lusk had exchanged. Matters between them had progressed pretty far by this time; they were using ripe language all over.

The love letters of Samson were as unprepossessing as his personality. They were full of abbreviations, chopped-off sentences, and sounded more like the direction for administering cow tonics or horse pills than the tender effusions of a strong man in the toils of a wily woman. And that is the picture of himself that Dr. Roberts is trying to flash on the screen of public opinion.

He wrote to her of being in Chicago, "where our tracks are still green, so we can't do much there." He wrote the day was fine, he felt like going out to a dance with her.

Her letters to him were the well-expressed letters of a woman of education. They had clever little turns of expression in them. She told him that when he liked her again to call her up, but if he was angry, he could call her down."

DIDN'T SIGN HIS NAME.

He did not sign his name to any of his letters. Curious streaks of caution like that crop out continually in their relations. She signed her letters. She seemed to assume all the responsibility of the affair. He was furtive. Again the high school girls took mental notes. "Is it well to do all the chasing?" their round eyes seemed to ask, and the high school jury has made up its mind about a thing or two during the trial, of that one may be certain.

Earlier in the day, during the brief morning recess, I had a little talk with Grace Lusk. Her glance is very direct, she looks one squarely in the eye. I told her I heard that she had done a good deal of war work while waiting for the trial.

"I did—as an agreement to keep myself occupied; knitted a little. There wasn't much I could do."

Friends of hers here interrupted us. They crowded around her, kissed her, shook her hands and wished her all good fortune. One of them, a Mrs. Smith, had brought her little daughter, Carolina, an attractive child of about five, and Miss Lusk nearly drowned her with hugs and kisses.

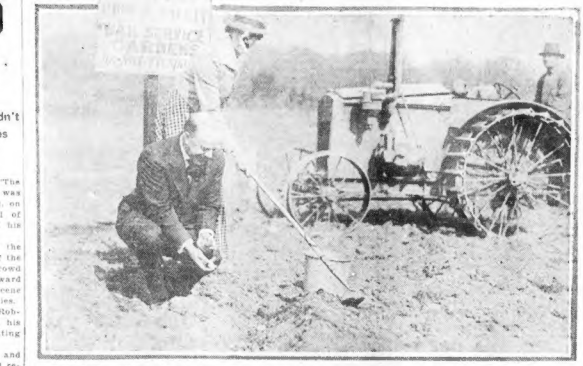
KISSES LITTLE GIRL.

She took the little one in her arms and kissed her again and again. Then more friends came, and more; it grew to be a regular reception. The woman on trial for her life seems as popular as Dr. Roberts seems unpopular. The only person I have seen talk to him during the trial was his business partner, young Blott.

I had quite a talk with Dr. Lusk, the old father, today. He is the pathetic figure of the trial, he and Mrs. Ergatia Newman, the mother of the murdered woman.

Dr. Lusk spoke with deep pride and affection of his daughter. She had put two years' work into one in the University of Wisconsin. He told me, too, that she used to be a Daughter of the Revolution and that she was entitled to membership in the organization both on her mother's side and his.

MAYOR AND HIS WIFE PLANT WAR 'SPUDS'



This is the official planting day, and here are Mayor Peters and Mrs. Peters planting the first potatoes in the city war garden in Franklin Field. The Mayor is putting in the seed and Mrs. Peters is "covering up." The tractor is "Liberty Queen," the redoubtable engine that has turned the turf and harrowed and furrowed the soil, preparatory to the great food drive by Boston.

Mayor Andrew J. Peters, assisted by Mrs. Peters, today launched the win-the-war agricultural drive by planting half a bushel of "Official potatoes" at Franklin Park. The scene of the attack on Old General High Cost of Living was the former golf links, and more than a hundred "citizen farmers" watched the demonstration.

Both Mayor and Mrs. Peters, hoes in hand, tackled the tough sod at 9 a. m. City and State officials stood by and applauded the vigor with which the work was pushed. Chairman George H. J. Johnson of the Food Production Committe superintended the job.

After the trenches were properly cleared of sods both Mr. and Mrs. Peters were handed a pail of seed potatoes by Park Manager Parker C. Youngman, and the work of dropping the cut seed went forward with "celat."

SPEECH BY MAYOR.

The Mayor Peters and the first lady of the city of Boston were assisted in the work of seed planting by Mrs. George B. Johnson and Miss Mary Collins, niece of Walter L. Collins, president of the Boston City Council.

Following the planting of the "spuds" Mayor Peters made a short address in which he complimented Chairman Johnson's committee on the amount of good work thus far accomplished. He then mounted the city's tractor, "Liberty Queen," and piloted the ungainly machine over a strip of plowed land.

Following the participation in the work of planting by the Mayor and Mrs. Peters, the good example set was followed by many of the "farmers" present, who scattered to their respective plots and commenced work.

MANY OFFICIALS PRESENT.

Among those who took and helped plant the first plot were Walter L. Collins, president of the City Council; Public Works Commissioner Colonel Thomas F. Sullivan, James B. Shea, Acting Park Commissioner; Mr. and Mrs. George B. Johnson, City Councillor Daniel Lane, F. Harry Jennings, business agent of the Central Labor Union; Victor A. Heath, chairman of the Boston Committee on Public Safety; Major Patrick O'Keefe, A. H. Van Pelt, A. M. Thompson and S. C. Donnelly of the food committee, and E. C. Donnelly, Francis J. McLaughlin and J. Walter Mullen.

"Eddie" Horrigan, the engineer in charge of "Liberty ueen," was complimented by His Honor for his work on the farms.

BRIDE KILLED BY GAS IN DOUBLE TRAGEDY

Suicide Discovered As Young Husband's Accounts Are Being Investigated

New York, May 18.—Side by side on a mattress on the kitchen floor in an apartment at No. 244 Washington avenue, the Bronx, Frank Soukup, 32, and his bride of a month were found dead. All the valves of the gas range had been opened. The bride was Miss Winifred Doedecke, before her marriage. She was twenty. At the time of the double suicide Manager Rudy of the Great Northern Hotel, where Soukup was employed as a cashier, was investigating the condition of his books.

Nettie Soukup of No. 499 East One Hundred and Eighty-eighth street, a sister of the dead man admitted to the police last night that her brother had been to see her shortly before the double suicide. She said he had admitted his accounts were short. Manager Rudy said it appeared from the investigation so far that Soukup was short in his accounts. He could not give the exact amount.

SPEED UP TRAINING IN SPECIAL COURSES

In view of the need for trained specialists in war work, the scheme of instruction in the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration has been modified. The new policy will involve the omission of many general courses for the duration of the war and a rearrangement of schedule which will allow students to include in one year's program all the specialized courses in certain fields. Non-college men will be accepted for instruction.

Plans have been completed by the Harvard Vocational Bureau to make an extended survey of occupations and opportunities for persons who have been physically handicapped through war or other agencies.

YANKEES SET HUN 'DUMP' ON FIRE

Give Germans Two Shells for One in Heavy Artillery Bombardment

By BERT FORD.
Staff Correspondent of the International News Service.

With the American Army in France, May 18.—The entire American sector on the French front in Picardy was subjected to a violent artillery bombardment for forty-five minutes.

The Germans hurled an avalanche of shells from the 77's, 105's and 150's into our lines. The Yankees replied with a double dose, setting fire to a German ammunition dump in the rear of the village of Cantigny.

French pilots brought down two German observation balloons, one crumbling to earth in flames. Nineteen enemy balloons were counted, one of them carrying a light signal apparatus. German and French aeroplanes were active throughout the morning and night.

The first settled weather in many days is marked by exceptional air activities day and night. The night resembled a Fourth of July celebration at home. Tracer bullets, caterpillar and star rockets, searchlights and bursting shells constantly filled the air.

ENGINEER DROPS DEAD IN MOVING LOCOMOTIVE

Garretson, N. Y., May 18.—John LaForge, an engineer on the Staten Island Rapid Transit Railroad, died suddenly in the cab of his engine as the train was moving out of the station. The train was stopped by the fireman.

CLAIMED RIGHT TO KILL HER, WIFE SAYS

Professor Petrovitch Accused in Counter-Suit of Choking Her in a Jealous Rage

New York, May 18.—"I may kill my wife if I wish. It is nobody's business but my own. She has disobeyed me by putting rouge on her face, and I will not allow that."

This statement was declared by Mme. Vera D. Petrovitch here to have been made by her husband, Dr. Woislav Petrovitch, distinguished Serbian writer, college professor and linguist, to two women who came from across the street to the boarding house in which the couple were living on September 11, 1917, to find out why Mme. Petrovitch was screaming. The intruders found, it is alleged, that the professor was choking and shaking his wife.

This information was embodied in an affidavit submitted to Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum by Mme. Petrovitch in reply to one previously filed by the savant charging her with cruel treatment of him.

A month after the choking incident, Mme. Petrovitch says, the professor left her, going to the home of his brother, Alexander. He began paying $15 a week for his wife's maintenance at a boarding house at No. 21 West Eighty-second street.

DEMANDED MAN'S NAME.

"He left his passkey with Mrs. Davis, keeper of the boarding house," said Mme. Petrovitch, "but a few nights later entered my room. He explained that he had had a duplicate key made and had come to learn the identity of the man who had supplanted him in my affections. I indignantly repudiated the outrageous suggestion, but he has frequently repeated it, sometimes choking me in an effort to compel me to admit its truth.

"On November 21, when we were living at the St. Andrew's Hotel," went on Mme. Petrovitch, "I was awakened during the night by my husband choking me. 'Get up and go to that door,' he exclaimed, pointing to the connecting door between our room and the adjoining one, 'and tell that man in it to stop living there to cease his signals to you. Tell him your husband will kill you.'

A few weeks later, Mme. Petrovitch says, she received an invitation from her mother to visit her at Grand Forks, N. D. Professor Petrovitch, she says, bought her a railroad ticket and gave her funds to defray the expenses of the journey. But at the time came for her to return to New York, she says her husband refused to forward money for the trip.

ADMITS STUDY FOR STAGE.

Mme. Petrovitch admits her husband's statement that she understudied an actress before her marriage to the head of the department of Slavonic languages at the New York Public Library.

Dr. Petrovitch's assertion that his wife enjoys an income from lecturing is answered by Mme. Petrovitch's statement that she has given readings at army cantonments.

"But my service in this regard," she explains, "is patriotic and I take no pay for it."

Dr. Petrovitch denies all of his wife's statements.

U. S. Flier 80 Hours Under Seaplane, Is Rescued

By International News Service.

Washington, May 18.—After having clung to the underside of a seaplane pontoon for eighty hours, without food or drink, Ensign R. A. Stone, U. S. N. R. F., of Norfolk, Va., is alive in London, after having spent five weeks in a hospital, the Navy Department announced today. Stone was on a scouting trip with Ensign Eric Moore of the Royal Naval Air Service when their plane collapsed and fell into the English Channel. The two men clung to the pontoon for more than three days before they were finally rescued by the crew of an English trawler.

STRANGLES HUN GIANT IN 'NO MAN'S LAND'

By BERT FORD.
Staff Correspondent of International News Service.

With the American Forces on the Picardy Front, May 18.—Lieutenant James Pellache, Harvard '19, son of a New York artist, is dead, after a gallant fight, in which, though mortally wounded, he strangled a German giant in a fierce tussle in No Man's Land.

Leading an infantry patrol, Pellache encountered a German working party and a fight at close quarters ensued. Pellache was shot in the head, but with a fractured skull and despite terrible loss of blood, he put the bigger man with whom he clinched out of business, and he and his men defeated the enemy with their fists and pistols.

Pellache, despite was a great inspiration to his men. He was honor man at the second training camp at Plattsburg.

Lieutenant J. A. Doherty, Harvard 1918, son of a coal merchant of Dorchester, Mass., said to the correspondent:

"Tell the folks at home that Lieutenant Stephen Fitzgerald of Sargent street, Roxbury, died fighting to the last gasp—a true gamester.

"Steve was with us in the second Plattsburg training camp. He was a cricket baseball player and a good fellow, an all-round athlete and as brave as they make 'em. He took part in a daylight raid in which a German machine gun nest was captured. He got a bullet in the head but refused to quit. He kept shouting to his platoon and fought like a tiger. A few minutes later he was wounded a second time by a machine gun bullet which pierced his abdomen.

"He staggered and said, feebly, 'I guess I'm done for, fellows.'

"Then he died, while his comrades cheered him in the presence of the enemy."

NEW SCHEDULE OF FARES FOR CALAIS RAILWAY

Augusta, Me., May 18.—The Calais Street Railway Company today filed a new schedule of fares with the public utilities commission proposing an increase in fare from five to six cents, effective June 10, 1918. The Calais Water & Power Company today filed a new schedule of water rates with the commission. The new schedule becomes effective April 1, 1918. The new schedule proposes various increases in the rates, including the first fixture in dwelling houses, etc., from $7 to $10 per year, laundry tubs and bath tubs from $5 to $7, domestic fixtures $1, stable rates by $1 and $2 in amount, and the use of hose from $5 to $10. Hydrant rates and meter rates are increased in varying amounts.

NEW CRISIS IN NEW ENGLAND COAL SUPPLY

Must Protect Industries Next Winter, Says Storrow in Warning

"New England's reserve coal pile is completely wiped out, and the shipping tonnage now in the New England coal trade is little more than adequate to meet current bituminous coal requirements.

This was the statement made by James J. Storrow at the meeting on federal fuel committeemen at the State House today.

"Upon a careful examination and study of the best data obtainable," he said, "the New England Fuel Administration has estimated that it will require a minimum of 24,500,000 tons of coal to carry the New England States through the calendar year.

"The National Fuel Administration, the Shipping board and the Railroad Administration, however, have shaved this figure down to a round 20,000,000 tons, of which, according to their estimate, the railroads can carry 10,000,000 tons and water transportation can be depended upon to take care of the remaining 20,000,000 tons.

THINKS FIGURES TOO LOW.

"We think these figures are entirely too low, but they represent the irreducible minimum.

"Four months of the current year are gone, and we have an opportunity to see exactly what has been accomplished.

"So far as the railroads are concerned, it appears that they have just about met the estimated requirements. With respect to water transportation, the record is not so good.

"There should have been delivered to New England ports from the holds of steamers and barges, according to the Government's estimated requirements, 1,233,333 tons of bituminous coal in each of the months of January, February and March and 2,000,000 tons in April.

"In January water shipments fell nearly 687,000 tons behind requirements, in February nearly 487,000 tons, and in March about 61,000 tons. In April there was delivered at New England ports nearly 745,000 tons less coal than the schedule called for.

WATER SHIPMENTS BEHIND.

"So it seems that water shipments of coal into New England have fallen close to 2,000,000 tons behind the lowest estimated amount that should have been delivered during the first three months.

"In order to get this 20,000,000 tons of coal into New England by water from the Southern piers, the Federal government estimates that it would have about 2,000,000 tons of steamships capable of averaging not less than 10 trips a month, or approximately all available barge capacity.

"On January 1 we had probably less than 1,000,000 tons of steamers. On March 1 the total steamer tonnage in the world was 1,000,000. By the middle of April this tonnage had fallen off somewhat, but to date, as the Shipping board has announced, more ships, there is a total of 61 vessels, aggregating 272,000 tons, in the New England coal-carrying trade.

"Owing to the severity of the winter, however, more than 26,000 tons of these steamers are temporarily out of commission on account of repairs.

"To present the outlook for steam coal is worse than it was a year ago, and the situation is certainly dangerous."

Suppose Your Boy Lay Wounded in a Field Near Home—Consider the Red Cross from This Angle Alone

YOU give some money to the Red Cross. It is poured into a fund that accomplishes wonders thousands of miles away. Maybe Red Cross doing is so remote from your giving that you lose the immediate connection. You don't quite get the personal touch.

But suppose you received word that your own boy was wounded in a field near the house and that it was "up to you," as they say.

Can't you see yourself telephoning for the doctor, running to the boy, bringing him into the house, tearing over to the drugstore for medicine, bandages and other supplies? The household is turned upside down. Nothing is too good or costly to overlook in this emergency. When it's over you find you have spent money and time and labor without thought because your boy was hurt and must receive immediate care.

RIGHT HERE IS THE RED CROSS ARGUMENT. AMONG THE INNUMERABLE ACTIVITIES OF THIS WONDERFUL ORGANIZATION IS ITS WORK ON THE BATTLEFRONTS FOR THE SOLDIERS—FOR OUR BOYS—FOR "YOUR BOY." IT MAY BE "YOUR BOY" UNDER RED CROSS CARE THIS MINUTE OR TOMORROW OR NEXT WEEK.

You can't run over to the battlefield and do for the boy. But the Red Cross can and will, providing it has the money. It takes millions to do all this. You give here and get results "over there." Think of this when counting out your Red Cross contribution next week.

RIEHLE DEFENDANT IN "LIFE CONTRACT" CASE

New York, May 18.—John M. Riehle, wealthy insurance man and president of the National Democratic club yesterday was named as defendant in a mysterious "life contract" case. The "life contract" is alleged to have been made by him with pretty Beatrice De Costa, a young woman who formerly worked in Riehle's office. She is said to have been a telephone operator. She asserts in a complaint, attacked by Riehle for "indefiniteness," that sometime between March 1, 1912, and October 1, 1917, Riehle made an agreement to pay her "not less than $18 a week for life." Miss De Costa demands $50,000.

OVERSUBSCRIBE LOAN BY MORE THAN THIRD

Approximately 17,000,000 Persons Bought Bonds, Treasury Department Says

By International News Service.

Washington, May 18. — America's third Liberty Loan has been oversubscribed by $1,170,019,650, the Treasury Department announces.

This result not only exceeds every other government loan in proving the patriotism of the people, according to department officials tonight, but exceeds as well the response of the people of any other nation in the war, including Germany.

Besides the material purpose of raising money to support the war, it is deemed of incalculable value in demonstrating to friend and foe alike the readiness and eagerness of the Americans at home to help those Americans at the front.

INCREASED INTEREST SHOWN.

Approximately 17,000,000 persons subscribed, almost twice as many as in the second loan and more than four times as many as in the first, showing an increasing interest among the people and a desire to sacrifice for the American cause.

Secretary McAdoo issued the following statement:

"In response to the Treasury's invitation for subscriptions to $2,000,000,000 United States of America 4¼ per cent. bonds of 1928 of the third Liberty loan, there have been received subscriptions to the amount of $4,170,019,650 from about 17,000,000 subscribers. This is the most successful loan the United States has offered, both in number of subscribers and in the amount realized.

UNLIMITED ALLOTMENTS.

"Every subscription was made with a full knowledge that allotment in full was to be expected, unlike the first loan when allotments were limited to $2,000,000,000, and the second loan when allotments were limited to one-half the over-subscription.

"This great result was achieved, notwithstanding the fact that the country has been called upon to pay, since the second Liberty loan and up and including the month of June, income and excess profits taxes to the amount of approximately $5,000,000,000, which will make a total amount turned into the Treasury of the United States from such taxes and the third Liberty loan of about $7,000,000,000.

4,000,000 BOUGHT FIRST LOAN.

"In the first campaign, which started just one year ago, bonds were sold to approximately 4,000,000 persons, and the country was amazed at this wonderful event of public interest. In October, about 9,500,000 bought Liberty Bonds, and now, with an even more effective organization and intense spirit of patriotism throughout the country, approximately 17,000,000 persons purchased of the third Liberty Loan. This equals approximately one-sixth of our total population.

"I congratulate the country on this wonderful result, which is irrefutable evidence of the strength, patriotism and determination of the people."

Three alarms were turned in, but the firemen confined the flames to the shop, saving the Archbald Wheel Factory next door, which is engaged on government work. The police estimated the loss at $4,000. An investigation is being made.

COURT DECIDES MRS. BURNETT 'BUTTED IN'

By International News Service.

New York, May 18.—The appellate division of the Supreme Court has decided that Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, author of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and other books, must stand trial a second time for writing a defamatory letter. She was sued for $50,000 damages by her niece by marriage, Mrs. Archie Fahnestock, of this city and Washington, but had the complaint dismissed at the end of the first trial.

In an opinion written by Justice Dowling, reversing the judgment and ordering a new trial, the court said Mrs. Burnett "butted into a family controversy without cause, and deliberately defamed Mrs. Fahnestok." The court said:

"Mrs. Burnett cannot claim privilege, as her letter was not written in reply to any letter directed to her. She voluntarily interjected herself into a correspondence with which she had no concern for the purpose of gratifying her malice against the plaintiff, Mrs. Fahnestock, or to satisfy some grievance of her own, real or fancied."

Mrs. Fahnestock's husband is the son of Mrs. Edith M. Jordan, Mrs. Burnett's sister. Mrs. Jordan received a letter in which there was some complaint about the way Mrs. Jordan and Mrs. Burnett had treated Mrs. Fahnestock. Mrs. Burnett took it upon herself to answer the letter although it was directed to Mrs. Jordan.

In a scorching reply of several pages she called Mrs. Fahnestock "a liar, slanderer, ill-bred-meddler, a shrew, and a brawler of doubtful character and antecedents and subject to brainstorms."

The opinion continues: "Mrs. Burnett's letter was most virulent, filled with asperations upon the plaintiff's character and evidently written for the purpose of humiliating, degrading and insulting her and holding her up to the contempt and ridicule of all those who might have an opportunity of reading it.

"The whole tone of the letter is unmistakable; its purpose apparent, and the malice which pervades it is manifested in almost every paragraph."

Mrs. Burnett explained at the trial that she delegated herself to make the reply for her sister, Mrs. Jordan.

WOMAN STOLE BABIES FOR LOVE OF THEM

New York, May 18.—"I loved the child as a mother," whimpered Pearl Ferguson, the sentimental baby stealer, when brought from Bridgeport, Conn., with the Jacobus baby which she kidnapped on May 3. The police sought to discover whether she had confederates or any ulterior motive for spirting off the child from its parents, Mr. and Mrs. Max Jacobus of No. 227 West One Hundred and Twenty Third street.

SPLENDID CAST IN 'OUT THERE' TUESDAY

Boston will have to work hard to beat the record hung up by Baltimore for a single performance of "Out There," at the Academy of Music last week, when $29,500 was taken in.

Even at grand opera prices the Boston Opera House will not hold more than $19,000, at one performance, and the extra money must be secured by premiums, flowers, programs, etc.

There have been many all-star tours, but this organization, which is travelling for the Red Cross and turning all receipts over to that body —the actors even paying their own travelling expenses, I understand— is the most wonderful assemblage of stars who ever got together.

That some of them are willing to appear in just bits of roles argues for the sincerity of the actors. Anybody who has ever seen the jockeying for position at an ordinary benefit, the jealousies and the bickering, will marvel at the docility of this assemblage of theatrical lions.

It happens that "Out There," with Laurette Taylor and her company, did not reach Boston. Miss Taylor, in fact, has not been seen here since before she made her great success in "Peg O' My Heart." As the play dealt with hospital work and the Red Cross it was chosen for this tour. Miss Taylor plays her original role. George Arliss plays the doctor. H. B. Warner will be Herbert, the useless brother of Annie, the heroine. Jimmie Powers will be Monty, the munitions worker. Helen Ware will be the Princess Lizzie, Beryl Mercer will be the gin-soaked mother, Chauncy Olcott the grouchy Irish soldier, James K. Hackett the Canadian trooper, O. P. Heggie the Cockney, Julia Arthur the nurse, George MacFarlane will be the Scotchman and George M. Cohan the American soldier. Max Fiske appears as a speaker in the Trafalgar square scene, Eleonora de Cisneros will sing the allied airs and Burr McIntosh will auction a souvenir program.

A Real Summer Show

You could always depend upon Colonel Henry W. Savage to introduce a large male chorus which could sing part songs harmoniously. He began it away back in "Prince of Pilsen" days, when they sang "Heidelburg." If anybody started to sing "Heidelburg" now he would get into quick trouble.

Colonel Savage has finally discarded the masculines. Even the array of exemplifiers in "Tool Tool" won't suit him any longer. Mitzi's new show, "Head Over Heels," has no male chorus.

"Head Over Heels" will begin what is hoped to be a long Summer season at the Tremont next Saturday night. The music was written by Jerome Kern, who officiated in "Very Good, Eddie," "Nobody Home," "Have a Heart," "Oh, Boy!" "Toot Toot," and numerous other recent successes. Edgar Allen Woolf developed the book from a story entitled "Shadows" by Walbre Bartley, the first dramatisation of which was made by Lee Arthur.

All I know about it is that George Marion plays the head of a troupe of acrobats, while Mitzi presumably is the little one they toss around in the air. Marion's work in "The Grass Widow" is still remembered. Supporting the diminutive star are such people as Margaret Jarman, recently with the Chicago Opera, and Robert Emmet Keane.

Gosh, We're All Friends.

Preliminary to making an infamous and highly horrible proposition in the first act of "So Long Letty," Walter Catlett grins enticingly and remarks, "Gosh, we're all friends."

This phrase has been selected as the title of a Revue to be given at Morosco's theatre in New York Sunday night, by the members of the "So Long Letty," company, and other Morosco stars who are within aeroplaning distance of New York.

The performance is a benefit for the stage women's war relief, in which Mrs. Morosco is greatly interested. Morosco was an extravagant as to send for the entire "Letty" company last Sunday to go to New York and rehearse the affair. I don't know what it's about, but while I was calling on Charlotte Greenwood yesterday Walter Catlett came in and borrowed a lot of female underpinning which he threatens to wear in the Revue.

Miss Greenwood is the prettiest funny woman I ever saw. You know that lady comedians are usually built like feather beds, or else so scrawny that they're obnoxious to look at.

Miss Greenwood has her angles, but she doesn't display them off the stage, and her comedy style is cherubic and bland. She says she is tired ambling around as Letty for eighty weeks without a rest, but she plans to go out in it again next season.

"These are war times. If you've got something folks want, dog gone it, give it to 'em. Don't pack it away and try something else. They sure want Letty."

Taps for the Season.

Manager Charles J. Rich's two theatres, the Colonial and the Hollis, close tonight for the season. It was the biggest year in the history of the Colonial, which played musical shows almost entirely, there being but two dramatic attractions, Warfield in "The Music Master," and Hopkins' "Arabian Nights." "Have a Heart," "Ziegfeld's Follies," Sanderson and Cawthorne, Raymond Hitchcock, "Rainbow Girl," "Cohan Revue" and "Toot, Toot," made up the season.

At the Hollis not a single musical attraction was offered during the season, but a very long list of artistic legitimate productions, which included Maud Adams, John Drew, Alexandra Carlisle and Ruth Chatterton, in their vehicles, and a long run of "The Thirteenth Chair."

A Flamboyant Private.

We have grown accustomed to seeing men in sailor's uniform dashing around in Flats and Packards, and private soldiers entertaining beautiful theatrical stars at expensive restaurants.

But what do you think of a private soldier who hires a special train to bring a crowd of his friends down to Camp Upton for a show in honor of the camp commander, General J. Franklin Bell?

Those who will appear at the entertainment arranged by this extravagant private are Fred Stone, George Cohan, Will Rogers, Harry Fox, Six Brown Brothers, Lillian Lorraine, Adele Rowland, Ann Pennington, Al Jolson and the Three Dooleys.

Now how long do you suppose a private with a drag like that will be allowed to remain in the ranks?

Who is he?

Irving Berlin, composer of all the latest rag-time songs and a number of musical comedies. The draft got him about three weeks ago, but him is a private's uniform, but it simply can't prevent him from being unusual.

Circus Efficiency.

The amazing efficiency of circus management will be thoroughly tested before the season is over. All the big shows are starting out as usual, with their customary trainloads of canvas, animals and people.

The railroads, however, are being operated in the interests of your Uncle Sam with the principal purpose of winning the war. If it comes to a choice between moving a freight train laden with grain or provisions a certain distance, and circus outfit, I hate to think what will happen to the circus.

Most of the circus operators are planning an emergency motor truck system to cover any such breaks in the schedule as may be caused by government operation of the railroads.

One of the first stops the Barnum & Bailey Circus will make will be Boston, and the tents will be pitched here for a week's stay, beginning May 27.

Securing labor for the circus this season is a great problem, since the ordinary type of circus tentman has been attracted to the army because of the similarity of existence or been collared by the draft. Consequently Barnum & Bailey announce that there are 1,400 people in their organization, the largest troupe which ever went out with a circus.

Drew's First Love

"I'm working very hard today," remarked Sidney Drew, between the acts of "Keep Her Smiling," at the Wilbur, Wednesday afternoon, "because I'm playing to my first love."

"What's that?" demanded Mrs. Sidney Drew, approaching rapidly. "Whom did you say?"

"My first love," replied Mr. Drew. "She's out front this afternoon. It's Lotta."

Miss Lotta Crabtree, who was the idol of our fathers for many years, was attending the performance, and Drew was actually putting his best foot foremost.

"I'll never forget how excited I was when Lotta was playing my mother's theatre in Philadelphia. I was about eight years old, but I felt desperately in love with this young and beautiful actress, as everybody else in America did also. And I never quite recovered."

Mr. Drew's son, Sidney, is with the French aviation corps, and Mr. Drew encountered Wellman, the American ace, at the Copley Plaza the other afternoon, who told him that Sid was a chum of his and one of the best of the American flying men who are helping the French. Wellman told of several of young Sid's adventures that he knew of, with the result that Sid's parents didn't sleep that night.

Webb With Us Again.

George Webb, who so successfully helped to promote the third Liberty Loan campaign a few short weeks ago, will be back again in this city as the Boston Theatre this week in a military playlet, "The Bonfire of the Old Empires," by Marion Craig Wentworth, who wrote "The War Brides" for Nazimova.

"The Bonfire of Old Empires" is a dramatisation of President Wilson's appeal for equality of empires. On its initial presentation in New York, many testimonials of praise were given it by men of national importance. George Creel, chairman of Committee on Public Information, wrote: It is my great hope that "The Bonfire of the Old Empires" will receive the widest possible showing, for it is one of the most powerful appeals to the ancient faith of a people that has ever been made, and cannot help but stimulate and arouse."

Shell Out, Boys.

Those popular officials of Waldron's Casino, Lawrence De Cane and Al Herendeen, have secured an unusually attractive array of talent for their benefit concert at the Casino tomorrow night. All the fellows who sit in the front row during the season are pulling for the show.

OUT THERE

What is probably the most notable and remarkable cast ever assembled in this country will appear for a single performance next Tuesday evening at the Boston Opera House in J. Hartley Manners' comedy, "Out There," to be given for the Red Cross. This is one of seventeen cities to be visited by the company on the tour, which is limited to three weeks.

The assembling of the company is the result of an inspiration, the play itself being one that centres around the Red Cross, its leading personage being a London girl who by heroic efforts succeeds in joining the Red Cross forces and finding her way out there, where she administers to the wounded. This role will be played by Laurette Taylor, who had made it her own through a very prosperous season in New York, and who will play it in this company. George Arliss will play the doctor; H. B. Warner will be Herb, the lackadaisical brother of Annie Hudd, Miss Taylor's role. James T. Powers will be Monty, the munition worker. Helen Ware will be "Princess" Lizzie, the haughty and strident-voiced sister of the household; Beryl Mercer will be the gin-soaked mother; Chauncey Olcott will be seen as the grouchy Irish soldier; James K. Hackett will be the deep-voiced Canadian; O. P. Heggie will be the Cockney; Julia Arthur will play the nurse; George MacFarlane will be the Scotsman; and George M. Cohan plays the American soldier.

Mrs. Fiske will be seen in the Trafalgar Square scene, delivering a stirring Red Cross appeal; Mme. Eleonora de Cisneros will sing the national anthems of the allied nations, and Burr McIntosh will auction a souvenir program. It will be seen that the characters have been fitted to the players for the individual talents of the gifted stars, thus lending added distinction to the performance.

TREMONT THEATRE

The tiny Mital, who has forced her way into the small group of unique personalities on the American stage of today, and particularly in musical comedy, will come to the Tremont Theatre next Saturday night, May 25, to begin a Summer season in the new play with music, called "Head Over Heels."

For all the unanimity of opinion in pronouncing her adorable in her mischief and charm, nobody could agree upon the pronunciation of her Hajos appendix. So it has been removed, and Mital—or Mit-see, if properly sounded—is found quite sufficient for identification purposes.

Henry W. Savage is considered to have given an unusual cast to this new work by authors of wide reputation, having a musical score by the favorite Jerome Kern, and book and lyrics by Edgar Allen Woolf.

In the support of the saucy Mitzi, the role of the insinuating, oily Italian master of the Bambinetti Troup of acrobats, will be played by George Marion, and Margaret Jarman and Boyd Marshall also are included in the cast. Besides these there are Robert Emmett Keane, Charles C. Wilson, Thomas Walsh, Dorothy Mackaye and a well known troupe of acrobats, who not only perform difficult feats but are called upon to play parts in the action of "Head Over Heels."

Although there are fully as many musical numbers heard in the action of the piece as in the majority of so-called musical comedies, it is told that producer Savage lays first stress on it as a play and secondly as a music work.

GAYETY THEATRE

The "Merry Rounders," trademark for high-grade burlesque, will be seen at the Gayety Theatre next week.

This is the Max Spiegel production, which has created a furore on the Columbia circuit for the three past seasons, on account of its individuality.

Featured in the production is Abe Reynolds, who will present a new edition of his famous character of "Jacob Rosenbloom."

In this year's production Reynolds portrays the character of an amateur smuggler, and the comedy is supplied by the complications which arise from Reynolds' attempt to smuggle a $5,000 necklace into this country without paying duty.

Florence Mills, with the most gorgeous wardrobe ever seen in burlesque, will play opposite Reynolds.

The chorus is up to the standard set by Spiegel, and will be garbed in some gorgeous creations.

George Totten Smith, author of the "Rosenbloom" series, is responsible for the present offering. Charles Kuebler has written some catchy numbers, and Edward Hurdy painted the scenery, which is in keeping with the times.

WALDRON'S CASINO

"BILL" is the title of the book to be presented all next week, beginning Monday matinee, at Waldron's Casino, by Fred Irwin's Big Show. And Leo McDonald, the author, intentionally gave it a name that would set people to wondering what it is all about. As a matter of fact, "Bill" refers to one Bill Shakespeare, whom Mr. McDonald has seen fit to resurrect and bring to Broadway, that he might see to what plight his beloved theatrical world has come. "Bill" is seen face to face with present-day conditions.

George Hayes leads the company, and among the women folk are Virginia Irwin, Adel Anderson, Hilda Berlin, Grace Estelle and Margaret Shane. On Sunday evening will be given the testimonial entertainment tendered to Treasurer Laurence De Cane and Assistant Treasurer Al Herendeen. There will be a great bill of vaudeville acts and photoplays.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE

There will be plenty of big features at B. F. Keith's Theatre for Red Cross week, with adorable Trixie Friganza, the premiere star in the firmament. Miss Friganza is one of America's foremost comediennes, as her work in "Canary Cottage" attested. With her in her present vaudeville venture will be seen Melissa Ten Eyck and Max Wally, two of the dancers who were featured with the star in "Canary Cottage." Rita Marlo is a clever girl, who has conceived the idea of assembling several others of her type, and all exceedingly beautiful and talented, and has combined their talents in an orchestra of her own. Hugh Herbert has written any number of character comedies, some for his own use and some for the use of others. A few of these he has kept for himself are "Prediction," "The Sons of Abraham," and his present vehicle, "The Lemon," a delightful bit of comedy with a touch of pathos. Joe Towle is a monologist, but he offers a good deal from most monologists. Lillian Fitzgerald is both imitating and imitated. This season she is supported by Clarence Senna, a composer-pianist. "Illie" Bert Kenney and I. H. Nobody, in a true delineation of the southern negro. Tonight there will be the usual Sunday concert.

The Truth About Shows I have Seen.

By the Dramatic Editor.

SHUBERT THEATRE—"So Long, Letty," Morosco's effervescent musical comedy about trial marriages enters its sixth week. It is a cheerful bit of nonsense, with a very capable cast.

WILBUR THEATRE—Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, in "Keep Her Smiling," enter their last week of a very successful engagement. The piece is a very amusing trifle, capitally played!

PLYMOUTH THEATRE—The end of the run of "The Man Who Came Back" is in sight, but the appeal of this stirring melodrama doesn't seem to lessen with the hot weather.

COPLEY THEATRE—Last week of "Charley's Aunt," a farce of never-ending popularity. A very excellent stock production.

MAJESTIC THEATRE—Griffith's mighty film, "Hearts of the World," with its marvelous war pageantry and its thrilling personal story, continues to attract vast crowds.

Hollis, Colonial and Park Square closed for season.

Tremont dark until Saturday night, when Mitzi comes in "Head Over Heels."

LETTY TO BE BLACKED UP

At the Morosco Theatre, New York, tomorrow night, Oliver Morosco will give a benefit performance for the Stage Women's War Relief. It will be the first and only performance of an original revue, entitled "Gosh! We're All Friends," which Mr. Morosco has written especially for this occasion, and which will utilize the services of practically all of the members of his "Lombardi, Ltd." and "So Long Letty" companies, including Charlotte Greenwood, Walter Catlett, Leo Carillo, Sydney Grant, May Boley and the "So Long Letty" chorus, while the cast will also include Mr. Morosco himself, Franklyn Underwood and other Moroscoites.

The first act will take place in a reproduction of the Morosco offices, in which Mr. Morosco will play his own part, numerous actors and actresses having comedy roles, while the second act will take the various applicants to the Morosco stage, where they are given an opportunity to rehearse and prove their various claims of ability to play roles, the complexity of which are totally unsuited to them. May Boley, the robust comedienne of "So Long Letty," for instance, cherishes a desire to play the "baby vampire," and is given the role. The last act will be the second act of "So Long Letty," performed in black face.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE

There will be plenty of big features at B. F. Keith's Theatre for Red Cross week, with adorable Trixie Friganza, the premiere star in the firmament. Miss Friganza is one of America's foremost comediennes, as her work in "Canary Cottage" attested. With her in her present vaudeville venture will be seen Melissa Ten Eyck and Max Wally, two of the dancers who were featured with the star in "Canary Cottage." Rita Marlo is a clever girl, who has conceived the idea of assembling several others of her type, and all exceedingly beautiful and talented, and has combined their talents in an orchestra of her own. Hugh Herbert has written any number of character comedies, some for his own use and some for the use of others. A few of these he has kept for himself are "Prediction," "The Sons of Abraham," and his present vehicle, "The Lemon," a delightful bit of comedy with a touch of pathos. Joe Towle is a monologist, but he offers a good deal from most monologists. Lillian Fitzgerald is both imitating and imitated. This season she is supported by Clarence Senna, a composer-pianist. "Illie" Bert Kenney and I. H. Nobody, in a true delineation of the southern negro. Tonight there will be the usual Sunday concert.

LIVELY POPS WITH NEW LEADER

The first of the spring music nights at the Pops and "Harvard Night" are scheduled for the coming week. Wednesday, May 22, the program will be devoted entirely to Italian music. The first "Harvard Night" in two years will come Thursday, May 23. Last year it was impossible to arrange a "Harvard Night," because practically all the undergraduate body was busy with military service. This year arrangements may be had whereby the students will get a night off for the Pops.

Mr. Jacchia has arranged a special program for this "Harvard Night," and it goes without saying that in the two intermissions the Harvard Glee Club will sing its latest songs.

"Italian Night," Wednesday, May 22, was arranged for and the program made, before the President's letter was published regarding the commemoration of Italy's entrance into the war on May 24, and so many had planned to go to "Italian Night" on Wednesday night, it was decided not to change the date. On Friday night, however, there will be special features in celebration of Italy's anniversary.

COMING EVENTS

A new comedy by Grant Stewart and Robert Baker, entitled "Arms and the Girl," will receive its first presentation in Boston at the Copley Theatre during the week of May 27. Its scenes are in Belgium during the first days of the German invasion, and its characters are a group of American tourists and several German officers. It is wholly a comedy in which there is involved much sentiment and humor.

YE WILBUR THEATRE

The attraction at Ye Wilbur Theatre, to follow Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew in "Keep Her Smiling," on Monday night, May 27, will be a new comedy of laughter, thrills and surprise, "High and Dry," by Louis Ely.

This work of a well known St. Louis newspaperman, is said to vibrate with that intense American spirit that has made the Middle Western drama so popular in recent years. The principal character is a high-mettled young woman, who runs a paper, a political page in a Missouri county, and she incidentally wins the affection of an editor, who for years has been the tool of the dry town boss.

There are promised many humorous sidelights, reflecting politics and newspaper life in a Missouri country village. The excellent cast chosen by the producers, W. P. Orr and J. M. Welch, includes: Edna Baker, who enacts the role of the heroine; Frank Sheridan, William T. Clarke, Esther Howard.

GRIFFITH AS HISTORY'S MUSE

As Herodituus was the first of the Grecian historians, Josephus the first celebrated Jewish historian, as Gibbons gave us his "History of Rome," Hume his "History of England," not forgetting Bancroft, Prescott, Parkman and Motley, it would appear that the next historian in line for world-recognition is none other than David Wark Griffith, the motion picture genius.

Through "Hearts of the World," Griffith's gigantic contribution to the world's record of the war, the American movie man has been declared by the Board of Historians of New York city, "The greatest of war historians." This board, in session in New York last week, through its president, Francis Trevelyan Miller, sent the following message to Mr. Griffith:

"At an editorial conference of our Board of Historians today we discussed the value of your motion picture masterpiece, 'Hearts of the World,' as a permanent contribution to the world's history, and we agreed that your production is the most notable on record that the war has produced. We therefore feel privileged to greeting you as the greatest of war historians. In a single picture you produce a vital, human record of the great war that embodies the spirit and the soul of the war with deeper reality than all the war books combined."

History hereafter probably will be divided into four epochs: Ancient, mediaeval, modern—and the motion picture. And in this latter class D. W. Griffith will undoubtedly remain supreme. Surely he has proven himself the first of the great cinema historians.

A Four-Cornered One

The remark of the noted French literary critic concerning the presence eternal of the triangle, necessary and all-important to be successful, see a definite to writers that they have been taking up with more or less success since, generally less than more. The eternal triangle may appear to be unobserved by an author to his or her story, yet the trinity of lovers will bob up serenely in stories that have been advertised as dodging the necessity. The motion pictures have shown, as illuminated translators of the printed word, these stories as well as the ones acknowledgedly built upon the triangle, but it has remained for one man to record many exceptions to the general rule. One of these is the photoplay in which Dorothy Dalton is pictured, "The Maid of Marcella," and which will be shown for the first time in Boston the early half of next week at the Orpheum Theatre.

The story was written by Joseph F. Poland and offers a quadrangle instead of a triangle.

Easily Fooled

Madge Kennedy, who ought to know, says that people are so easily fooled that it is a temptation to a girl not imaginative and lively wits to make deception her life work. Of course, Miss Kennedy qualifies such a sweeping statement by unfolding her inimitable way and bringing an expression of droll mischief to her eyes.

Anyone who knows this clever little star is quite sure that such a conviction would never prompt her to be anything but herself—fun-mad, unaffected, thoroughly honest girl. Yet the fact remains that Miss Kennedy's experience in her various plays is enough to give her grounds for her opinions if not actions.

In "The Fair Pretender," in which she will be shown for the first time in Boston throughout the coming week at the Modern Theatre, Miss Kennedy has the part of a poor little tryple who finds herself taken up by fashionable society. The ease with which this is accomplished and the entire lack of complication proves that any girl possessed of beauty and good clothes can get anything she wants—and once in society, the girl finds that lies must be resorted to in order to continue, and it is this necessity that brings about a most startling denouement.

Holmes a Villain

Since the event of "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde" there have been many dual personalities portrayed in fiction, but seldom does this strange being of composite natures appear in real life. Stuart Holmes, who plays the part of Frederick Burton in "When Men Betray," the new picture Lewis Abramson is making for the Graphic Film Corporation, is one of the exceptions. And like the famous character conceived in the mind of Robert Louis Stevenson, at one moment he is a courteous, polished gentleman of his time, filled with kindly human impulses, and the next a most consummate villain, heartless, calculating, with all the instincts of the brute.

And the transformation can be brought about at will—all he has to do is to step into the focus of a motion picture camera, and all his better qualities slip from him like a cloak, and he becomes the very personification of evil. His very feelings undergo a change, and he not only portrays, but feels, in every little particular, the character the scenario calls for. In every-day existence this wonderful kindness to animals is a dominant trait, while in a picture he has been known to thrash a dog without any apparent compunction.

In "When Men Betray" he has created a character of great worth from a dramatic point of view, because it so strongly emphasizes its unworthiness from a moral standpoint, in showing the depths to which an unscrupulous man can descend in furtherance of his own ends.

Absolute dislike was the feeling he engendered in the minds of his co-artists, while the picture was in the making, but as soon as the day's work was done he became the life of the party and his delightful personality made him the favorite of the company.

With all the scenes taken, and the cutting and assembling begun, a film well under way, "When Men Betray" is scheduled for an early release.

MODERN THEATRE

A pair of photoplays promising generous pleasure are on the bill at the Modern Theatre throughout the entire week. Madge Kennedy will be seen pictured in her new photoplay, "The Fair Pretender," as a stenographer who is led to assail the provinces of society through the acquisition of a rich wardrobe, and though she finds the task of pretending to be of the elect an easy one, indeed, elegant upon her pretension to create a dilemma which is not on the program. Such a pass is where Miss Kennedy should be when at her best, and from advance word, the promise will be fulfilled. The companion photoplay, also shown for the first time, will be "The Interloper," picturing Kitty Gordon and Irving Cummings in leading roles. The story concerns the experiences in a southern household of the second wife of the son of the family, and the manner in which she won the prejudiced once over to her side.

GLOBE THEATRE

The motion picture, "Over the Top," with Arthur Guy Empey pictured in his own role screened from his popular book of like title, will bring its engagement to a close tomorrow evening at the Globe Theatre, there being two Sunday performances, at 7 and 9 p. m.

COLUMBIA THEATRE

A brace of excellent photoplays will be shown at the Columbia Theatre during the first half of the week. Douglas Fairbanks will be shown pictured in his latest photoplay, "Mr. Fix-It," in which he is seen as a bearer of other's troubles, to the accompaniment of many humorous adventures, sprinkled with stunts of the particular Fairbanks brand. Bill, the Burke will be shown in "Let's Get a Divorce."

ST. JAMES THEATRE

Charles Ahearn and company will be the leading act of the vaudeville bill at Lowe's St. James Theatre, the first half of the week. This act includes a number of specialties offered by the company, and the "tramp" characterization that has been made famous by Mr. Ahern. Other acts include Walter Percival and company, in his new comedy, "This Way Out"; Dudley Douglas, in songs and comedy; Cunningham and Bennett, in a "rising act," and Mack and Faye, in dancing exhibitions. On the screen will be shown the latest Pathe Pictorial, a comedy and the photoplay, "Up the Road With Sallie," picturing Constance Talmadge, the Thursday change of bill will bring Violinsky and company, in the musical phantasy, "The Genius."

LANCASTER THEATRE

Two mammoth bills of photoplays will be presented this week at the Lancaster Theatre. For the first half of the week there will be shown, for the first time in Boston, the William Fox production "American Buds," picturing Jane and Katherine Lee, the clever child players. This is announced as a rollicking, sparkling comedy enforced by a background of romantic drama. Another photoplay will be Harold Lockwood, in "The Landloper," and as an added attraction, Charles Ray, in "Golden Jim." The bill for the last half of the week will include Mary Pickford, in her photoplay of the poor tenements, "Amarilly of Clothes Line Alley."

BEACON THEATRE

The two first-run photoplays to be shown at the Beacon Theatre throughout the week include Madge Kennedy in "The Fair Pretender." In this she plays a stenographer who, through the medium of stylish wardrobe, enters the portals of society, with an ease that astonishes her. She carries on her deception very cleverly, but this entails lying, which proves to be the generator of a heap of obstructions that, leap as she may, cannot easily be surmounted. Only after the most prodigious efforts, and aided by a young man who has fallen in love with her, does she succeed and find happiness in the newer role of wife. By all premises, a happy vehicle for the Kennedy personality, and Irving Cummings in "The Interloper," recounting the adventures a wife meets among her husband's family, the strict proprieties of southern folk entering the lists against her. Short comedies and News Pictures complete the bill. The usual Sunday film show will be given.

BOSTON THEATRE

Twin features, with each running neck and neck for the supreme position, will be the topliners of an excellent bill at the Boston Theatre the coming week. Elsie Janis, the dainty Swedish film star, will be seen in Rex Beach's newest photoplay, "Heart of the Sunset," and George Webb will be seen in the one-act vaudeville playlet, "Bonfire of Old Empires," by Marion Craig Wentworth, author of "War Brides."

CODMAN SQUARE THEATRE

An excellent vaudeville and motion picture bill is offered for the first half of the week. Chief on the bill will be Harold Woolf and Helen Stewart, in the one-act comedy, "Two Flats." Other acts to be seen are Roy La Pearl, in "A Vaudeville Surprise"; Helen Emillon Trio, in an athletic act, and Vaughn and Dreams, two girls who are capable singers and pianistes. On the screen there will be shown the latest News Pictorial, and the photoplay, "The Risky Road," picturing Dorothy Phillips. The bill for the last half includes Manning, Feeney and Knolls, in songs and comedy; "The Melody Garden," a musical production, presented by a company of seven people, with special scenic and electrical effects; Rose and Moon, in "This From Musical Comedy"; Reynolds and White, in "Variety Bits," and on the screen Norma Talmadge, in "By Right of Purchase."

PARK THEATRE

Two superb photoplays are promised by Manager Soriero at the Park next week. They are May Allison, in "The Winning of Beatrice," and Earl Williams, in "The Seal of Silence."

In "The Winning of Beatrice," Miss Allison plays a girl whose ability to make home-made candies of unusual quality, wins her a fortune. The play deals with a trade war between a big candy manufacturer and the Allison home-made product.

In "The Seal of Silence" Earl Williams is married to a woman who hates children, selfish, cold and a gambler, but one whose lack of sex interest keeps her from overstepping the bounds. The husband is decoyed away by another woman, but the law keeps them apart. How they are united in the end is the story. There is a Sidney Drew comedy, Albertini, the baritone, the Park Orchestra. Sunday night Clara Kimball Young is featured, in "Marriage a la Carte," and Doris Grey in "Her Beloved Enemy."

KATZ KIDS ON FILM

"Wrestling" with the intricacies of an income tax report is not, ordinarily, the occasion for much mirth, but in a current release of the Educational Films Corporation of America, of an International Film Service black and white comedy, featuring the Katzenjammer Kids, peels of spontaneous, uncontrolled laughter from audiences everywhere are greeting Captain Katzenjammer's efforts to figure how much he owes Uncle Sam and the manner in which the Kids "help" him.

"The Black Mit" is the name of the comedy, and in it these famous little comedians, through the aid of divers animals, black hands and bombs, succeed in putting the Captain through some very lively paces and end, as usual, by securing their just reward.

On this same reel is another page from Raymond L. Ditmar's "Living Book of Nature," entitled "Adaption." It shows how the screech owl and the secretary bird adapt themselves to the dangers they have to meet, the owl catching mice and the bird killing and eating snakes. The secretary bird, in the country it inhabits, has the protection of the government, because of its usefulness in ridding the land of snakes.

FENWAY THEATRE

Douglas Fairbanks appears at the Fenway on the first three days of the coming week in his newest photoplay, "Mr. Fix-It," carrying a unique roll which, it is said, affords so many surprises as to entitle the portrayal to the distinction of being not only one of the best in which this athletic star has ever appeared, but one whose spirit is entirely new in motion pictures.

On the same program Florence Reed, who is conceded to be one of the most effective delineators of the dramatic art in pictures, appears in "The Woman's Law."

On the last three days of the week William S. Hart is featured in "The Return of Draw Egan" and Baby Marie Osborne in "Dolly Does Her Bit," a most unique bit of patriotic sentiment which will reach the heart of all who follow the story.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE

For the final week of the Castle Square season, beginning Monday, there will be an attractive bill of pictures and music. For the first three days, Douglas Fairbanks will draw much laughter and applause with his comedy photo-play, "Mr. Fix It," an ingenious scenic narrative in which that clever comedian draws upon all his varied mirthful resources.

REVERE BEACH

Not in years has there been such pleasant weather for the enjoyment of beach pleasures, and Revere Beach, with its manifold attractions, has been entertaining numerous thousands every day and Sunday. Among the many attractions open each day to the public, are the Pit, the Nautical Ballroom, Palace of Wonders, Mountain Railway, Hippodrome, Merry-go-round, River of Doubt, Yiddish Reel, Palace Merry-go-round, Giant Coaster, Panama Canal, Horlee's Hordlers and Jack Rabbit Coaster.

10,000 MARCHERS IN LYNN WAR CHEST PARADE

The Greater Lynn War Chest Association is planning for a parade of 10,000 residents of Lynn, Swampscott, Nahant and Saugus, Wednesday evening, May 22, as part of the program for the war chest drive for funds May 20 to 27. All future campaigns for war funds will be taken care of out of the fund subscribed by residents of Greater Lynn.

Fraternal and civic organizations, and soldiers and sailors home on furlough will take part in Wednesday night's parade, which starts at 7 o'clock from Washington square and disbands at City Hall one hour later.

ESTABLISHES D. W. GRIFFITH

THE GREATEST OF WAR HISTORIANS

The most remarkable tribute ever paid to any producer connected with the theatre in America is the honor just bestowed upon DAVID WARK GRIFFITH by the Board of Historians, whose members have designated Mr. Griffith THE GREATEST OF WAR HISTORIANS.

My Dear Mr. Griffith:

At an editorial conference of our Board of Historians today we discussed the value of your motion picture masterpiece, "HEARTS OF THE WORLD," as a permanent contribution to the world's history.

It may interest you to know that we agreed your production is the most notable on record that the war has produced. We feel privileged in greeting you as THE GREATEST OF WAR HISTORIANS.

In a single production you provide a vivid, human record that embodies the spirit and the soul of the war with deeper reality than all the published books combined.

You, Mr. Griffith, are the first of the great Cinema historians, and this is the position that you will occupy in the records of human progress.

(Signed) FRANCIS TREVELYAN MILLER.

WAR CAMPS ARE IDEAL, SAYS JOHN D., JR.

"Uncle Sam a Mighty Good Daddy," He Assures Parents of Boys in Service

New York, May 18.—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has just completed a tour of the military camps in the East. He said in an interview that the American father or mother who has a boy in the army or navy need have no fear about his welfare. Mr. Rockefeller inspected army and navy camps and stations, forts, naval bases, hospitals, Y. M. C. A. buildings and other points. He delivered five addresses.

At the close of one of these addresses Mr. Rockefeller said he would be glad to meet any of the men personally. His audience of 2,000 service men arose as one. He shook hands with all of them. Many of them asked him to write.

"Are you going to do it?" he was asked.

"Of course I am," he replied.

Regarding the welfare of the men he said:

"Many a father and mother, born in foreign lands, who gritted their teeth when their sons were called, have uttered words of gratitude to their adopted country when they saw their boys home on furlough, bigger, better, healthier and happier because of their army and navy training.

"America's war preparations are not merely making abler and healthier citizens out of young men. They also are doing much to Americanize their fathers and mothers, who in some instances, probably because of no fault of their own, have not had opportunity to become familiar with the ideals, customs and traditions of our country.

"Uncle Sam is a mighty good daddy. He's taking good care of his boys. The boys are healthier, happier and more patriotic, and they are very, very restless to get overseas. Their eyes are on France. They'll give a good account of themselves. That we all know.

"One cannot visit our camps and inspect our war activities without becoming tremendously impressed with the immensity of the work we have undertaken. It taxes a man's comprehension to grasp the bigness of the work we are doing, and to note the rapid progress we are making is indeed very satisfying.

"The Y. M. C. A. is of tremendous practical benefit to the men. Soldiers and sailors have said to me that they could not get along without the association."

WEATHER MAN AIDS RED CROSS DRIVE

The weather man joined the boosters for the Red Cross drive today, and declared that the signs were propitious for a continuance of good weather over Sunday at least.

The official forecast was: Fair and not much change in temperature tonight and Sunday; moderate south to southwest winds.

For the second time this season no temperatures below freezing were reported throughout the country, and one might be justified in stating that Spring is really here. Eastport, Me., as usual, was the coldest spot in New England at 8 a. m. with 48 degrees, while Boston was the warmest, with 66, only 10 degrees less than Key West, the hottest place in the country. The mercury jumped 16 degrees from 61 at 8 a. m. to 77 at 10 a. m.

LITTLE BOBBY CONNELLY, juvenile picture star, buyer of Liberty Bonds.

Little Bobby Connelley, the juvenile picture star, who is appearing in person at the Park Theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, under the management of Thomas D. Soriere, proved his loyalty to his country two weeks ago when he bought a $50 Liberty Bond, bringing his total holdings up to $200. Nine out of ten children who had received a tenth of the publicity and adulation which has been awarded Bobby, would be hopelessly spoiled. Bobby, however, is composed of different fibre. His natural sweetness is so deeply inherent that the attentions which have been showered upon him ever since the recognition of his talents by Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company, have totally failed to turn his head; and he is as much of a real boy as any typical child who has grown up far away from the blazing light of publicity which has been turned upon Bobby for so long. Immediately upon the finish of his professional work for the day, he turns in his playmates and romps and ravoris plays ball, swims, in fact comports himself in a thoroughly healthy and natural fashion. Just now, like all other boys, he is engrossed with the war, and with his comrades he improvises uniforms, drills and marches, particularly in tremendous imaginary conflicts, and saves his country several times.

TIGERS IN FINAL STAND

Jennings and Great Ty Cobb Anxious to Take Farewell Wallop at Red Sox

By NICK FLATLEY.

H. Jennings and his tame Tigers leave Boston this evening after staging a final game with the once more conquering Red Sox at the Fenway. The once dangerous flock of athletes, not even a shadow of the old threat concealed anywhere in their midst, will undoubtedly give three of those cheers on departing.

They haven't shown Boston a thing, and depart from here more firmly bogged in than ever. Jennings has a good hitting club, as per custom, but his pitchers appear to be even worse than usual, which is saying a jungle full.

TIGERS HELPED BARROW.

This fact has been a material advantage to Manager Barrow, for he hasn't been forced to remove any regular hurlers, no matter what the enemy happened to be doing. Leonard's flinging in the finale yesterday was woefully weak, but Dutch rode through to a 11 to 8 victory, because his defence was steady.

The Tigers, in addition to dolorous pitching, kicked in with five errors, and thereby obliterated the moral and scoring effects of their swatting.

Bullet Joe Bush, who had a somewhat Leonard-like time on his last mound appearance, was sent out to make the series four in a row, and had enough practice warming up while Dutch was wobbling yesterday to be in good trim.

The fact that Joseph rather than some one of the second stringers was chased to the bull pen is a complete explanation of what the Sox director thinks of his reserve sharpshooters.

RUTH DUE FOR BIG DAY.

Fortune has been with him, in the shape of good weather. No doubleheaders have been piling up and consequently he can do all his pitching worrying about the present.

If he can manage to ride the Big Four through the early Summer and keep the team up there, it's a cinch that he will capture somebody capable of helping out, and thereby keeping in the drive for the finish.

That's looking a long way ahead, though. T. Cobb has a pretty wide margin on batting while Ruth in the hitting duel, but the local Hercules is just about due for one of his big days.

CURTAIN IS RUNG DOWN ON PIMLICO MEETING

Baltimore, May 18.—A large crowd was on hand to bid farewell to the thoroughbreds at Pimlico until next Fall. Poultney won the opening event. He was carried wide, but won by two lengths from Little Maudie.

Old Presumption spilled the beans in the second. Eddie Henry placed and Estimable, which made all the pace, showed.

Today was commencement day at Medford and nothing would please the Tufts collegians more than to defeat the Maroon and Gold. The teams will meet in a return game at Alumni Field, Newton, Decoration Day.

U. S. SOLDIERS ABROAD MAY SEE BIG LEAGUERS

An Atlantic Port, May 18.—On a special mission to America to induce the National Baseball Commission and the major leagues to send professional players to France to play America's national game before the American troops there, William J. ("Phil") Clark, once a catcher with the famous old Baltimore Orioles, arrived here today on a French steamship.

The military authorities in France are unanimous that baseball is needed for the soldiers, according to Clark, who is a physical director working with the troops on behalf of the Young Men's Christian Association. Baseball is of keen interest to the troops, who demand the daily scores of the major leagues, Clark said.

BALL PLAYERS BARRED FROM ENTERING CANADA

Toronto, May 18.—The refusal of United States customs officials to permit members of the Toronto baseball club to enter Canada from Niagara Falls caused the International League game between Toronto and Binghampton, scheduled for this city, to be postponed.

The officials were dissatisfied with the evidence as to the standing of the American members of the team in the draft. All the team had passports, but the customs men wanted papers from local exemption boards, or references to the American players.

Corbett's Corner

By JAMES J. CORBETT.

Jim Jeffries is still a world's champion—at the la savate style of boxing. Jack Johnson took the Queensbury title away from the wonderful Californian in Reno, but Jeff still owns the crown which he won in Paris.

Back in 1900, a few months after Jeffries won the championship from Bob Fitzsimmons, the big Californian decided upon a brief trip to Europe. He went to London, made a big hit, and then jumped over to Paris and opened in the Folly Marescy Theatre, with his brother, Jack, acting as his sparring partner.

The exhibition of the two Americans delighted the Parisian audience to a certain extent, but at that time Frenchmen were not thoroughly familiar with the intricacies and the beauty of Queensbury boxing.

La savate was the kind which they favored. They admitted Jeff's supremacy in his own line of boxing endeavor, but it was their freely-expressed opinion that a la savate warrior could put a Queensberry boxer to sleep in a hurry.

All of which created an idea in the mind of the enterprising manager of the theatre. Why not match Jeff with La Blah, the world's champion at la savate, each fighter to wage battle according to his own particular style? The proposition was put to Jeff.

FRENCH CHAMPION SIGNED.

"What is this la savate stuff?" queried the big champion.

"Oh, under the rules governing that style of fighting, a man can use his feet to kick as well as his hands to punch," was the explanation.

"You mean that I'm to fight a guy who is privileged to kick me if he wants to?" demanded Jeff.

"Yes, but don't let it worry you, Jim!" cut in John S. Barnes, who was one of Jeff's party on that trip. "This La Blah is a 140-pound frog eater—and he can't kick hard."

Barnes then pointed out to Jeff that if he agreed to such a match the admission prices on the night of the fight would be doubled and Jeff would be given 55 per cent. of the gross "gate."

"Virah the match," advised Barnes. "It's easy money."

And Jeff did.

GREAT PUZZLE TO JEFFRIES.

The difference in size between the huge 220-pound Jeffries and his tiny French rival, elicited gasps of astonishment from the audience. But, just the same, the Frenchmen were confident that their countryman would triumph over the burly American.

They didn't know the power of Jeff's punches and they reasoned only upon the acrobatic ability and the kicking power of La Blah.

The two rivals walked to the centre of the ring, shook hands, and Jeffries at once assumed his famous crouch. Then Frenchie stood away, and folded his arms—an action which surprised Jeff considerably.

Jeff took a step forward and feinted twice. La Blah jumped back and folded his arms once again. Jeff's face was a study. What kind of fighting was this?

Suddenly, La Blah rushed toward the ropes, leaving Jeff standing in the centre of the ring looking after him in a perplexed sort of way. As he reached the ropes, La Blah whirled around and then made a wild dash at Jeff.

Four or five feet from the amazed American the la savate artist leaped high into the air, jumping clear over Jeffries. In doing so, he swung his right leg and it struck its target—the jaw of Jeffries.

The impact of the Frenchman's shoe against the head of Jeff was heard in every part of the theatre.

At once a great cheer broke forth for La Blah. He had scored the first "blow." Ha! Ha! La Blah was winning — La savate was triumphing over Queensbury!

Meanwhile, Jeffries was rubbing his wounded jaw, looking first at the Frenchman, who stood with arms folded on the far end of the ring, and then at his own seconds with an expression on his face which seemed to say:

What sort of a game am I up against?

ONE BLOW WON THE TITLE.

For a half minute or so Jeffries made no move nor did the Frenchman. Then the Parisian battler suddenly whirled like a dervish, and after completing two full circles hurled himself high into the air—and at Jeffries.

Once again the shoe of his right foot collided with the head of the American just as he was clearing the shoulders of the crouching Jeffries.

Having leaped over Jeffries and delivered his "blow No. 2," Frenchman hopped over to his own corner, executed three fancy whirls, and then came to a dead stop with his arms folded—a pose which was the sign for the Parisians to applaud wildly.

Jeffries looked over to his corner with an expression on his face which said plainer than words:

"Fun's fun—but this is too much."

Ten or fifteen seconds later the Frenchman whirled again and leaped once more at Jeffries. But this time the great Californian was waiting for him.

His side-stepping a trifle as the Parisian battler flew toward him, and as La Blah got in range, Jeffries' right fist flashed out—and La Blah hit the canvas with a terrific thud.

The fight was over—and James J. Jeffries was the la savate boxing champion of the world.

TECH FIELD IS SCENE OF BIG TITLE MEET

Tech Field, Cambridge, was the scene of the annual track and field championship meet of the New England Intercollegiate A. A. The big show was carded to get going at 2 p. m.

Trinity, Brown, Bowdoin, Amherst, Williams, Middlebury, Wesleyan, Tech, Tufts and Boston College were represented. All told, the entries totaled 223.

The 100 and 220-yard dashes were expected to be battles royal between Saunders of Tufts and Bossert, Tech's star.

Mahoney of Bowdoin was picked to land first place in the quarter-mile, with Bowden and Orman of Tech close up.

G. R. Goodwin of Bowdoin appeared to be the best in the 880. He won the individual cross-country run championship last Fall.

Boston College was counted as having point-getters in Barry, who finished second last year; Ed Hannon and Captain Bob Simmons.

SERVICE TEAMS READY FOR SUNDAY BALL GAME

With the right sort of baseball weather, another big crowd is sure to be on hand at Braves Field, tomorrow afternoon, for the free Sunday baseball team in which Fort Warren's crack team will meet the headquarters team in the series of Sunday afternoon service games now in progress at the home of big things.

The crack team will be favored tomorrow with real big league umpiring. For President Ban Johnson of the American League has very graciously assigned Umpires Dinneen and Nallin who will then be in this city to officiate behind the bat and on the bases.

NOLAN HERO OF MEET WON BY E. BOSTON HIGH

East Boston High rolled up a total of 36 points in winning the first annual district high school meet at Wood Island Park. Hude Park High, with 44½ points, was second, and South Boston, with 40½ points, was third.

William Nolan, hero of the indoor meet, held in March, proved the star of the meet. He won the 220-yard run and got second place in the running broad jump.

BRAVES READY TO REPEAT VICTORY

Stallings' Boys Hit Stride and Show the St. Louis Fans Some Real Baseball

St. Louis, May 18.—Braves 8; Cardinals 1. That's better, much better, from a Boston viewpoint.

While Art Nehf was baffling the clan of Headricks, turning in a nifty four-bit performance, his artillery drove Horstman to the showers and gave Doak, a Class A right-hander, one of the direst drubbings of his career.

Nehf had the locals blanked until the final canto when they bunched two of their four hits, and, helped along by two pifflers, produced the lone tally that came their way. Not only was Nehf practically unhittable, but the classy southpaw refrained from issuing a single free ticket.

ARTILLERY WAKES UP.

George Stallings' artillery went on a merry swat spree. Everybody but hero Nehf figured in the bombardment, with Red Smith the big noise. The Braves' third baseman turned in a perfect batting performance and got a strangle hold on second position in the National League's batting table.

Horstman opened by passing Powell. Herzog's infield out put Powell on second and Kelly's single scored him.

Horstman walked Smith and Koney, the first two batters facing him in the second, and Doak went to the hill. Rawlings bunted, but Doak threw to Baird and forced Smith.

Wilson doubled, Koney scoring while Rawlings went to third. Nehf sided to Jack Smith and Rawlings was thrown out at the plate.

Another attack was put on by the Braves in the fourth. Wickland singled, Smith advanced and Koney doubled to left for a run. There was a cipher in the fifth, but another spurt in the sixth.

RAWLINGS COMES THROUGH.

With two down, Smith singled and stole second as Koney walked. Rawlings singled, counting Smith, and Wilson singled, scoring Koney.

The sighth was opened by Red Smith with a double to left. Koney batted him home with Snyder's fumble. Smith reached third, and while Herzog fielded Paulette's ground a double play on Rawlings' grounder, Smith scored.

In the ninth Powell dropped a single in right and rode home on a triple to left by Kelly. Kelly scored Captain Buck with a single.

Dana Fillingim, who blanked the Cubs getaway day in Chicago, or Tom Hughes will have to do the heavy work for the Braves today. Jack Scott, first pick was Lee Meadows.

LEVINSKY VACATES HIS POST AT CAMP DEVENS

Camp Devens, Ayer, May 18.—Battling Levinsky has resigned as boxing instructor at Camp Devens and returned to his home at Bridgeport, Conn., where, it is reported, he has taken a position with a submarine building concern. Private Tommy McFarland, Boston welterweight star, has been appointed Levinsky's temporary successor.

BUNTS AND BINGLES

By H. W. LANIGAN.

GOOD-BY, BILL JAMES, and good luck! Boston will never forget you. You were one of the best bets the Red Sox ever had and would have become another Ed Walsh if your right wing hadn't let you down. Your services have been summoned to his home in California. There you will be free from the rigors of baseball and can devote your physical exams. before he reported to Stallings at the Miami camp.

HUGH JENNINGS still has King Tut, Bobby Veach and Ty Cobb in the outfield, a smack of heavy topliners, while Pep Young and Bobby Jones are still at the keystone sack. There's something radically wrong with the Tigers, in fact, there always does something radically wrong with them.

* * *

PRIMARILY, IT'S no same old trouble—no pitchers. Yes, Dutch got quite a bunch of talent in the draft. So did a lot of others, but Detroit's scouts have got the worst of it since plate decision that the mattress wasn't counted.

* * *

WHOOP-LA! MATTY'S Reds made it three straight over the Giants. To date on the home lot, Manager McGraw, who seemed invincible the way he breezed through the wire, has booked up to bat one or six battles out West. This time Bressler and New Rube was the single hero, while Les Magee, Groh & Co. peppered Poll Perritt in pert style.

* * *

HIPPO VAUGHN opposed the Phils. Bill Killifer, his battery mate, busted out the hits that drove over the two Cub counters.

* * *

ART NEHF came through in great style for the Braves. Everybody hit, with Smith, Kopsicky and Kelly swinging the best bludgeons. The Braves' record on the trip is 5—3 and two of their defeats were by one-run margins.

* * *

FIGURING THE way the race is going, with the Giants taking such a lumpy tumble, it's tough the Braves get off to such a bad start. For the past fortnight they have been playing good ball. What's better, their daily show is growing quicker all the while. So all may yet be well.

BABE RUTH TUMBLES; RED SMITH TACKS 14 POINTS ON HIS NOTCH

BABE RUTH suffered a hideous slump with the bat, and took a big tumble in the batting averages of the American League, but is still well in the lead.

Speaker gained on Maisel. The big three:

	A.B.	H.	P.C.
Ruth, Boston	50	21	.420
Maisel, St. Louis	31	12	.387
Speaker, Cleveland	91	35	.385

Red Smith Going Up.

The three most leaders in the National League remain unchanged.

Red Smith, who beat out Merkle by a bare margin Thursday, outdistanced the Cubs' first baseman, turning in a perfect record. They stand:

	A.B.	H.	P.C.
Doyle, New York	54	23	.426
Smyth, St. Louis	43	17	.395
J. C. Smith, Boston	90	35	.389

Kid Lewis Defeats Tillman and Keeps His Ring Crown

Denver, May 18.—Ted (Kid) Lewis of London got the decision over Johnny Tillman of Minneapolis in twenty rounds at the Stockyards Auditorium and retained his world's welterweight crown.

There was a delay of over an hour in starting the fight. Jimmy Johnston, Lewis' manager, showed up toting Billy Roche of New York. Freddie Welsh's former personal referee, with him, and insisted that he be permitted to run the battle.

It was Lewis' fight throughout, with the exception of the fourth and seventh rounds. In the fourth Tillman had a shade and in the seventh he had a good margin.

After all, Billy Roche was the referee, but the decision was given by three judges and their verdict was popular.

Giants Buy Niehoff to Play 2d While Doyle Is Out

Cincinnati, May 18.—In an effort to fill the gap made vacant at second base by the illness of Laughing Larry Doyle, the Giants today purchased the release of Bert Niehoff from the St. Louis Cardinals. The second-baseman will reach here today in time to play in the fourth game of the series against the Reds.

This is the fourth National League player Niehoff has played with. He started with Cincinnati and later was traded to the Phillies. Before the present season started he was traded to the Cardinals for "Mule" Watson, the pitcher.

It was said that the Giants paid $3,000 in cash for his services.

KID QUEENS FAILS TO KEEP DATE WITH SMITH

Kid Queens of Brooklyn, middleweight, who was to have met Jeff Smith of Bayonne, N. J., in the main bout of twelve rounds at the Commercial A. C. last night, telegraphed at the last minute he would be unable to come over. As a result, manager Sol McKirdy was forced to abbreviate the entertainment. He likewise issued "rainchecks."

An announcement was made that those holding reserved stubs could exchange them for tickets for next week's show at the club offices, room 8, No. 23 School street.

Those were given two six-round bouts free of charge. Girard Gianni of Lowell, welter, and Eddie Harcelli of Quincy drew and Kid Lee of Chelsea outpointed Burt Jones of Revere.

Young Cabello of East Boston and Kid Julian of Rochester, N. H., are matched to furnish the feature set-to next Friday night.

A. A. U. ASKED TO PUT BAN ON STARS

Miss Durack, Noted Australian Swimmer, May Not Be Permitted to Compete in U. S.

Miss Fannie Durack and Miss Mina Wylie, Australian women, who hold several world's amateur swimming championships, are on their way here for an exhibition tour of the United States.

They may not be permitted to compete at any sanctioned meets of the Amateur Athletic Union, however, as their amateur standing has been impaired through a request from Mrs. Hugh McIntosh, president of the New South Wales Ladies' Amateur Swimming Association, which was received by Secretary Rubien of the Amateur Athletic Union. Mrs. McIntosh cabled: "Ladies' swimming tour cancelled. Please interdict Durack and Wylie defying authorities."

Secretary Rubien replied as follows: "Durack and Wylie cannot swim in amateur competition in the United States without sanction of your association."

Mrs. McIntosh had made arrangements for these two great Australian swimmers to begin a tour of this country, beginning at the Pacific Coast about the middle of June.

They were to have taken part in several women's national amateur championship swims, both here and in Canada.

Miss Durack won the women's Olympic swimming championship at Stockholm, Sweden, in 1912.

'Done With Men at Nineteen'

By Beatrice Fairfax

A GIRL of nineteen writes me that she is "done with men."

She is hurt and angry—her letter fairly quivers with wounded pride. She does not realize she is only passing through an equinoctial of youth—one of those tornadoes that tear young hearts to tatters but never kill. She is too young, too lacking in experience to know that her most golden days are ahead, and that the youth of nineteen is worth a kingdom.

She is seeing all the world and eternity, too, through the tear-dimmed mists of her first heartache.

I am sorry for her, but there is nothing to do but wait for time—that magic lotion—to allay the pain and at the same time to administer a dose of that great antidote, experience.

It seems that my young friend worked in an office with a young man five years her senior, and from the beginning they were much attracted to each other.

After awhile the boy began making love, very tentatively at first. He would put a rose on her desk and ask her to wear it if she were not absolutely indifferent to him, and she would wear the rose.

The Affair Progressed

Then there was the day when he kissed her back of the filing cabinet, and she didn't object—at least not enough to discourage him.

He told her that he loved her. They went to the "movies," the theatre, and to dinner Saturday evenings, and walked in the park on Sunday. There was a good deal more kissing as the affair progressed, and the girl writes me she regarded herself as engaged, though all this time he never definitely mentioned marriage.

But he would say sometimes, when they walked by an attractive house, "I wish we could afford to live there." And, "Perhaps, some day, I can afford to give you the house you deserve."

All of which my correspondent regarded as sacred as a betrothal ceremony.

The poor child actually bought a "hope chest" and began embroidering centrepieces and bureau scarfs and other dainty things into which girls sew all the sweet, tender thoughts of home and the future.

Then, gradually, there were fewer walks in the park on Sundays, less theatre and "movies" during the week, and less kissing back of the filing cabinet!

The girl persisted in her belief in the engagement, and continued to work for the "hope chest." Then, one awful day, a friend told her that her supposed fiance was going to marry the daughter of a wealthy man who lived near the friend in a suburb.

My correspondent asked the young man if the were so, and, after some pretty uncomfortable moments, he admitted the truth of the rumor.

His Idea of "Innocent Fun"

The girl asked him what he meant by his treatment of her, and he answered: "I'm awfully sorry if you are hurt, but I thought we were just having a little innocent fun!"

The poor child was heartbroken. She went home and burned the contents of her "hope chest," and gave herself up to utter wretchedness. Then she wrote me she was "done with men," and all sorts of bitter things, besides.

The girl was a victim of overconfidence. She regarded the boy's casual love-making, what he called his "innocent fun," as sacredly binding. She took things too much for granted.

She was assuming that conditions were the same as before girls went into offices to work for salaries. If a young man acted toward a girl in her father's house as my correspondent describes, there would have been an accounting to her nearest male relative.

The boy's behavior was bad enough from any standard, but times have changed, and there is a feeling that a girl in business ought to be able to take care of herself—and her emotions.

The situation smacks of the business maxim, "Caveat emptor"—let the buyer beware. Young girls in business, too, must beware. They are there not as damsels of old, relying on the chivalry of knights and squires for protection. They are working as efficient, responsible business people who are supposed to leave their emotions at home when they come to the office in the morning.

Both Stealing Time

When the boy began to make love to her during office hours, and kiss her back of the filing cabinet, both were stealing time that didn't belong to them, and both did wrong.

The girl took her choice, and she must now take her medicine. In allowing him to kiss her the boy decided that she, too, was having a little "innocent fun." It meant nothing in particular to him, therefore it meant nothing in particular to her—from his point of view.

If she had refused to accept this casual love-making he would have gotten a different impression of her character, and there might have been another story to tell. Poor little thing—I hope her unhappiness won't last long, and next time she will know better. For there will be a next time, in spite of all her protests.

You have to be twice nineteen before you realize how gloriously young nineteen really is. There is a whole world of beautiful sunshine before her. Perhaps she does not know it, but she has the most magnificent possession life can give—youth.

She may not realize it, crying out her heart tonight, but there isn't an old down-at-the-heels chap who wouldn't give all the family jewels to change places with her. To be nineteen is a gift of the gods.

Portable Kitchen for Schools

A portable kitchen was used with success in Wilmington, Del., to teach the children how to conserve food. It was transported from school to school as the work required. An exhibition was given of the five varieties of Liberty Bread that the children made from conservation recipes in the prize contest conducted by the Woman's Committee of the State.

The Manicure Lady

By William F. Kirk

"I WENT and bought me another Liberty Bond yesterday," said the Manicure Lady. "Goodness knows, George, that ain't doing none too much for my country, and I wish I could do more."

"I've got two myself, so I'm one of them bloated bondholders you hear tell about," said the Head Barber. "I guess if everybody come across as strong as I done this country will be in hang-up shape."

"We done our bit up home," said the Manicure Lady, "all of us except Brother Wilfred, and the poor boy ain't got the price to buy no bonds or nothing. He won't keep what he calls one of them commercial jobs, and there ain't no profession that has welcomed him with open arms, though goodness knows he has tried so hard to be a poet and song writer that he has got wheels in his head. We can't seem to explain to him that poets and song writers are born and not made. He just plugs right along, trying and trying, when he might as well be trying to stop the allies' offensive, or whatever they call it."

"Them Liberty Bonds was a grand scheme, well thought out," declared the Head Barber. "It ought to make them kings sit up and take notice, the way the people here are coming across and helping Uncle Sam. I'll bet there ain't one of them kings that could get a rise like that out of his people. The only wonder to me is that them kings don't get another kind of rise but of the people, like in the days of the French Revolution. I'd like to be one of them swell orators for a few weeks. Maybe I wouldn't tell them suckers something about the gents that is using them for come-ons."

"I guess it wouldn't go so good, George," said the Manicure Lady, "They've been bossed by a Kaiser so long that they can't see any other way out. They say if you take one of them goldfish out of a globe and put him in a big tub full of water he will keep right on swimming around and around in a little circle, the same as when he was in the globe. I reckon it must be the same way with a lot of folks that has always looked up to a king. I don't know—it's too deep for me, anyhow. All I know is that this country ain't ever going to stop till the kings is in the discard."

"It must be a pretty swell job, at that, being a king," said the Head Barber, rather enviously. "I'd like to be a king just long enough to tell a few guys where to get off. I'd like to send Joe Blow to Siberia, for one thing. He gave me three tips on horses last week, and not one of them turned out right. I can't afford to be getting that kind of information."

"The only kind of information about racing is the kind I've been giving you all these years," declared the Manicure Lady. "Ain't I been telling you along, George, to lay off on those horses and save your money? Ain't I?"

"You sure have," admitted the Head Barber, "and I'd be a lot to pocket if I had took your tip. But anyhow, I managed to get two of them Liberty Bonds, and that's going some for a gent in this here profession, especially with tips coming in the way they have been lately—about one customer out of every five leaving any chicken feed with me."

"Well," said the Manicure Lady, "better and brighter times is coming before long, George, and when them kings is all on the frito pan and me can be glad we lived to see their finish!"

Alcohol as an Enemy

SOME OF THE DISEASES TRACEABLE TO ITS USE

By Brice Belden, M. D.

ALCOHOL is a most potent poison for nervous tissues, and when used constantly, even in small quantities, produces organic changes. Persons of nervous temperament, particularly, should avoid the use of alcohol, since they are most apt to suffer from the effects of the poison upon the higher centres of the nervous system.

The after depression of alcohol is such as to more than counterbalance any temporary sense of well being induced by its use. The initial depression is not noted because of the narcotic effect of the poison. It is a depressant from first to last, contrary to the popular impression that it is a stimulant.

Muscular power is lessened by alcohol. When men have to undergo severe exertions, together with exposure to all weathers, as in warfare and in exploring expeditions (particularly in Arctic work), alcohol has been found to lessen the men's efficiency.

It is true that alcohol is used to some extent in the European armies fighting in France today, but this has been necessary because of the habituation of many of the men to alcohol before the war. The efficiency of the confirmed user, such as it is, would doubtless be lessened were alcohol to be wholly withheld. This fact, however, has no bearing upon the effects of alcohol upon non-users.

Tobacco, too, has to be given to soldiers who before the war were accustomed to use it freely, for the same reason that we have stated in regard to alcohol, but we know perfectly well that the efficiency of the non-user would be lessened were we to make him a smoker and inhaler.

The chemist tells us that alcohol is consumed in the system to much the same way as starch and sugar, and that the energy yielded by it enables it to take the place to some extent of other foods. Some call it food, others name it as a substance capable of partially taking the place of certain foods.

But there is danger in concluding too much from this fact, because the foods whose place it can take in a certain sense are not, like alcohol, possessed of properties detrimental to the physical welfare of the individual. How can a thing be called a substitute when it wrecks one, "while the thing for which it is substituted possesses only healthful properties?

Even if alcohol be a food, in a certain sense, intoxication would occur long before a man could get the equivalent of a full meal.

Liebig thought that alcoholism is not the cause but the effect of poverty. The well-fed man is not apt to be a spirit drinker. The underpaid and underfed worker finds in alcohol a narcotic which relieves him at times of the effects of malnutrition and overwork. Of course, the repetition of this temporary anesthesia over and over again finally demoralizes the victim, for it is only a palliative device. What the man needs is better pay, better food and a better industrial environment.

Even where there is an abundance of food, it may be improperly chosen for the needs of the individual, or ruined by bad cooking, or not digested and assimilated because of poor teeth. Hence another form of malnutrition and consequent alcoholism.

Planting a War Garden

VALUABLE PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS

The following article is sent out by the National War Garden Commission, which aims to increase our gardens throughout the country, and thus to help discard a victory over Kaiserism.

FERTILIZER is the gardener's greatest problem. The prices are high. It is out of the question even to think of potash, which is one of the necessary fertilizer elements, for the war has put its price beyond reason—in fact there is little potash to be had at any price, says the National War Garden Commission.

But there is one commodity which exists in considerable quantities in every city, and that is manure, the best of all fertilizers. The owners of coal, ice and lumber companies, and of delivery concerns, who employ many horses and thus have much manure to dispose of, usually sell it.

The human food need is so great this year, however, that quantities of this manure should go to those cultivating back yard and vacant lot gardens. The man who can provide free manure to gardeners who cannot afford to buy it will be real public benefactors. The Department of Agriculture urges advance preparation in this regard.

Another necessary item for the new gardener is lime. Particularly in vacant lots in which the ground has not been stirred in years the soil is apt to be acid. It it is sour and acid soil which the novice gardener undertakes to cultivate, he will be disappointed with results.

Fortunately the liming of garden soil is not an expensive proposition. A pound of lime only costs a penny or so in bulk quantities, and a pound of it will sweeten thirty square feet of ground. Send a two-cent stamp to the commission for a free war garden primer.

Plants are like animals in that you must fed them if they are to thrive. There is a certain amount of plant food in soil, but additional plant fertilizer, put into the ground, will produce greater crops.

Bound in Jewels

At the bottom of the Atlantic lies a jewel-bound copy of Omar Khayyam, it was on its way to this country in the ill-fated Titanic, which struck an iceberg on its first voyage and foundered. A similar volume is, however, still in existence. It is in the museum at Frankfort, and in its binding twenty-one opals are set.

Another jewel-bound book which was in the hands of a continental collector is a copy of "Romeo and Juliet." It represents the labor of two men for eighteen months—Alberta Sangorski, who wrote, and illuminated the vellum pages, and the craftsman who fixed the gems in the binding. There are 400 precious stones in a setting of gold on the cover, and the weight of the book is about ten pounds. The jewels and their gold setting form hearts, doves and flowers emblematic of love. The red flowers are formed by clusters of rubies.

American possesses an illuminated copy of the poems of Keats, which he valued at something like $10,000. The poems are written on vellum and illustrated with original watercolors. It is bound in morocco, elaborately gold-tooled, inlaid with over 4,409 pieces of colored leather, and set with over 1,000 precious stones set in gold. The book contains a miniature of Keats set in clusters of pearls and turquoises.

Now for Maytime Parties

By Loretto C. Lynch

Instructor War Cookery, N. Y. Evening High School for Women.

"LET'S have a May party, ms, aw do!" Kiddies everywhere are saying it, aren't they? A "lot of trouble" and "you have no time for such nonsense"? Then just consider this: Since the beginning of history no children have ever spent their childhood in a time of greater moment. It is indeed the most serious of times. And even American children, to some extent, are deprived of some foods of which boys and girls of the last generation had plenty.

A good thick slice of bread thickly buttered with real butter and dipped into the overflowing sugar bowl is a thing of the past. For now "a good boy" or "good girl" must be satisfied with a War Saving Stamp or a Thrift Stamp.

So start right in before the lovely month has passed to arrange that May party.

Of course, Uncle Sam and Columbia must march in the parade. And the older boys and girls will be glad to help you plan crepe paper costumes to be worn by little folks representing our allies. Almost every day in school they see those allied flags or the teacher shows them pictures of the peoples in the war-ridden zones.

If there are several hundred children to go it is perhaps best to have each child carry an individual lunch.

If there are only forty or fifty, then one might plan to have somebody's car carry the lunch. In any event, it might be well to have a wagon or auto carry the makings of the lemonade, as well as the ice cream and paper spoons, cups and plates to the park.

The lemons may be squeezed at home and the juice boiled with sugar and bottled. Allow a pound of sugar for sixteen lemons and boil until a thick syrup is formed.

At the park one will need but to add a pint of good cold water for each lemon used. If you pack an individual lunch put in several substantial sandwiches. Baked beans mashed with a little tomato catsup make a good sandwich filling. Chopped cooked meat or poultry or finely chopped, hard cooked eggs, moistened with mayonnaise, or cream cheese mixed with chopped walnuts make good fillings.

Cake, fruit, crackers and sandwiches should be wrapped in waxed paper and packed into a paper box that the child may throw away. And if there are soldiers encamped near by extend a May party invitation to a few, at least. You will be surprised how they will respond. They'll join in dances and games with all the enthusiasm of youngsters, and some evening in the indefinite future a group of soldiers in No Man's Land will think kindly of you who "let them come" to your kiddies' May party.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Did He Tell the Truth?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen and in love with a man twenty-one, and was sure of his love for me, up to two weeks ago, when I asked him to call at my home one evening. He replied that he was very sorry, but had to work late and could not possibly come.

That same evening I happened to be visiting a friend, who lives opposite him, and on my way saw him talking to some men. This was in the early part of the evening. I called him, but he told me he was busy.

Since then, Miss Fairfax, I have treated him very coolly—and he has likewise adopted the same attitude toward me when we meet, merely "bidding the time of day."

Don't you think I was entitled to an explanation? My friends say that I did not give him a chance to explain; that I should have treated him just as I did before this happened and given him a chance to explain—and that treating him indifferently, after being so friendly with him, made him think that I had ceased to care for him. As I know your sensibility, Miss Fairfax, I am depending on you to advise me what to do, as I really am very fond of him. L. B.

YOU made a mistake, when your friend told you he would be busy on a certain evening, in attempting to force yourself on his attention by calling him. Then, as you immediately resented his conduct and began treating him coolly, you have hardly given him a fair chance of explaining things. Your letter would indicate that you are of a rather exacting disposition, and whether this young man had business or not, you were obliged to accept his explanation that he could not call because he expected to work. On the other hand, if he had been very much broken up over your cool treatment he could have written you a letter asking you to give him another chance. I wonder if you have been showing your affection for him too plainly—a very risky thing for a girl to do. I don't believe I'd take the affair too seriously; probably both of you have had nothing more serious than a passing fancy. You might, in the meantime, meet him again somewhere and not treat him so coolly and give him a chance to explain.

Too Young

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have a son seventeen years old infatuated with a girl of eighteen, whom he wants to marry. I have told him he is too young to know his own mind. I heard of the engagement through friends. I want to save him from himself. I have nothing against the young lady, who has left home and wants to marry right away. D. W.

OF course he is too young and it is your task tactfully to prevail upon him to wait. You must proceed cleverly in order not to antagonize your son and not to make him feel that you are cruel and unsympathetic toward the girl he loves. Why don't you invite her to the house frequently, throw your boy into her society all you can? Keep him from feeling that it is a delicious adventure to see her and that she has the great charm of the forbidden. Be sweet to her and make the whole affair as simple and commonplace as possible. Try to make the boy feel that you are an understanding, sympathetic friend, that will probably take the "edge" off his romantic adventure.

No, He Is Right

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am seventeen and lonesome. I want young companions—and have only one girl friend. Don't you think father is doing wrong by not permitting me to meet young folks? He claims that going around and having a pleasant time is waste of time. Father says I should sew and read so that I will be capable of meeting the world. I am young and crave for a good, decent time. What do you advise? Is he wrong?

JUNICE G.

PERHAPS father is a bit extreme, but he is erring on the safe side. You are missing a little fun now, but you are being prepared for the struggle with life. However, it is a little hard to know how to meet people and deal with them unless you have had some experience along that line. So I think your father might compromise and let you enlarge your circle of friends a bit. One or two nice boy friends who would visit with you in your own home and who might easily make friends with your father — a few more pleasant girls—all under father's supervision, and it would still be possible for you to do justice to your work and the cultural arts which your father wants you to know about. Reading and sewing are splendid. But we all need a few human contacts. I don't want father to let you gallivant about, but I do want him to let you have just a bit more fun to leaven the work and study. If he will not make the best of his decision — and don't feel abused. All you can learn now will be too little for your needs and see some day, and you will thank father for your education.

Not Safe

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am sixteen and have a girl friend of the same age with whom I am forbidden to go. The neighbors talk about her because she speaks and is acquainted with a great many young men.

When she and I go somewhere she generally meets someone she knows, and she introduces me to him. Some of these are gentlemen and some are just the opposite.

L. L. G.

I DON'T like gossip and scandal. I don't like cruel judgments of either people. But, little girl, you are too young to risk your reputation in a friendship which may not be good for you from any point of view. Older, wiser folk than you have forbidden you to see this girl. Perhaps they have a real reason for their attitude. You mustn't disobey your parents for a girl who is either indiscreet and indifferent to the opinions of others or who may actually be altogether the wrong sort of girl for you to know.

URGES PRACTICE OF THRIFT TO WIN WAR

Employers and Workers Should Purchase Bonds and Stamps, Says Kittredge

Both employers and employes have a responsibility in promoting thrift during the war in order that more money may be available for investment in War Savings Stamps and Liberty Bonds and in order that more money may be given to organizations like the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A., says Edward H. Kittredge of the Federal Reserve Bank.

"Save to invest; save to give" would be a good war motto, Mr. Kittredge thinks.

Employers have a moral responsibility, he says, to direct the efforts of the employes in saving and giving. The responsibility of the employe is to save in order that he may give. The joint responsibility of both is to check waste and the spending of money for unnecessary things.

"With increased wages due to the war has come increased purchasing power for the American working-man," says Mr. Kittredge. "Although power to the laborer he should save all he can of what he gets in order to invest this money in War Savings Stamps and Liberty Bonds and thus aid the government in winning the war.

DOES NOT REALIZE POWER.

"The American workman apparently does not realize his increased power in the scheme of things to judge from the way he is spending his surplus after all necessary expenses have been met. The sensation of having plenty of money left after paying all bills is new to some and there are so many lures to spending it in lines outside of actual wants.

"Yet he cannot give unless he saves and there are organizations like the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A. to engage his aid.

"In all this the employer has a moral responsibility. Unless he directs the efforts of his employes the results in saving and giving are apt to be meagre. Thrift should be encouraged by the employer who takes the right sort of interest in those whom he employs.

"One of the big Boston concerns that was quick to realize this is the Old Colony Trust Company, which employs a small army of men. Early in the campaigns for the raising of funds for the Y. M. C. A. and the Red Cross, the company was encouraged the efforts of its employes in the way of the collection of money.

FORM SAVINGS CLUBS.

"The same is true of inducing its employes to save in order to invest in Liberty Bonds. Savings clubs were formed in order to get the best results. This idea I think might be coupled with profit by many business concerns in Boston. Unless there is co-operation between the employer and the employe the right results will not be attained.

"The newspapers are one of the most powerful agents for good in checking extravagance and waste in the public as they give to the great need for avoiding both. As the war goes on the need for thrift will become proportionately greater. The lesson cannot be learned any too soon.

"Saving for Liberty Bonds and Thrift Stamps might well be carried on after the war to make the Americans, like the French people, a nation of small investors."

DEMOCRACY BOSTON, SATURDAY, MAY 18, 1918. LIBERTY

LEVINSKY QUITS AS BOXING TEACHER

By WILLIAM FLYNN.

Camp Devens, May 18.—Five men, four of whom belong to prominent Boston families, who came to this cantonment and enlisted as privates in a short time are among the candidates selected to attend the fourth officers' training camp, and have started on a course of instruction through which they hoped to qualify as second lieutenants.

They are J. Tucker Burr, Jr., Francis W. Sargent, Jr., Richard Lovering, Alexander Grant and Kenneth Hale. Hale is the son of United States Senator Frederick Hale of Maine.

These five men are over the draft age. They were admitted to the training camp upon special recommendation. Each of them enlisted here shortly before the fourth training camp was scheduled to open. They were sent to the camp as soon as Q. A. Shaw McKean of the headquarters troop was casualty, but were attached to the 304th Infantry Regiment for quarters and rations.

It was announced today that Battling Levinsky is through as a boxing instructor at this cantonment, and will resume his position with Joseph E. Hayerpfl of the commission on training camp activities at Washington, who had refused to grant him a furlough so that he might earn money as a professional boxer.

Levinsky left the cantonment last week without notifying Captain Richard F. Neiligan, athletic director, that he intended to give up his berth. Captain Neiligan sent a telegram to Levinsky's home at Bridgeport, Conn., one week and the "Battler" wired back that he had accepted employment with a shipbuilding concern in Bridgeport.

When Levinsky became boxing instructor at this camp he was exempted from military service. His work with the men who came in the first draft is said to have been excellent, but since the men in the second draft have arrived, Levinsky's work has been regarded as unsatisfactory. Levinsky wanted a furlough so he could fight for himself, but his request was turned down.

Officers said today they never knew Levinsky had ever been a shipbuilder, but it is a matter quite of professions of his present employment he is also entitled to deferred classification in the draft. The action of the instructor at this cantonment has not been named.

The military horse show that was staged here was one of the most brilliant society functions that has yet been held at this cantonment. The outside of the show ring on the main parade field was filled by the wives of prominent society women of Boston and New York.

Lieutenant Tohosky of C company of the 302nd Machine Gun Company was thrown and received a broken leg when his horse fell at the third barrier in the class in jumping for enlisted men. There were two other spills.

CHELSEA MAN HELD FOR FAILING TO REGISTER

Roy M. Ross of Fourth street, Chelsea, was held in $500 by United States Commissioner Hayes on the charge of failing to register for the draft. Ross admitted to the commissioner that he has been sentenced to Deer Island House of Correction three times and served three times to the State Farm.

He was in the Chelsea Court on a charge of drunkenness. Ross has claimed that he was over draft age, but his mother informed the court that he passed his thirty-first birthday last January, and consequently within the draft age. He will probably be inducted into the army.

Lodge to Give Party

Mizpah Lodge, N. E. O. P., of South Boston, will give a costume party on May 24, in Red Men's Hall, 368 Broadway. Lawrence. William H. T. Read, Frances Clark and Mrs. Margaret J. Trainor are in charge.

EDITORIAL

It might raise the "Esprit de Corps" of the wives of many of the officers at Camp Devens if the officers' parties at the cantonment were a bit more informal. Several officers' wives whose principal sources of income are their husband's salaries say that the other women who attend the parties dress so elaborately as to make suffer by comparison and for that reason they remain away from functions they would otherwise gladly attend.

This complaint is growing and there is danger of a social line being drawn that is likely to be embarrassing. The army is not at fault. The officers are not to blame. The trouble is with the women, and it would be a good idea if some of them got together and conducted a few gingham affairs to promote a more friendly feeling.

JUNE 5 "PIE DAY" FOR MELROSE BOYS AT CAMP

Melrose boys at Camp Devens with have "Pie Day" June 5. On the preceding day Mrs. Mary Gray, a famous cook, and some who are willing to try, and the housewives in general, will prepare pies. Many kinds of goodies. The men are expected to contribute tobacco or cigarettes. These will be taken by auto to Devens by Miss Daisy Edwards, chairman of the canteen committee, and others, and distributed among the Melrose boys, and if there is a surplus, to their less fortunate messmates.

FORBIDS SECRET NOTES UNDER STAMPS

By S. HARRY FERRIS.

Aboard the Receiving Ship at Boston, May 18.—No more postage-stamp camouflaging in the Navy. This is forbidden by a general order which Paymaster-General Samuel Ward Stanhope has just issued.

For some time past rumors have been reaching the naval authorities that some of the newer men in the service were conveying contraband information to their friends by the simple device of affixing it to small characters in the corner of an envelope and then pulling the stamp over the postage stamp. It is not probable that there has been a leak of any information of importance through this channel, and the officials are inclined to believe that the practice has been due more to thoughtlessness than to any real desire to circumvent the naval regulations.

An example of the peculiar situations into which the boys are sometimes led by the ingenuousness of navy methods was witnessed on the ship this week. A small draft of recruits was sent out to put a new flag on the islands on the ship flag mast. When they had put on the flag they allowed it to fall on the ground and remain there while they continued with their work.

The boys of the ship were wholly unaware of the fact that in neglecting themselves to serious punishment. Only the tact until an older man in the service gave them a quiet tip.

The Red Cross Does the Work That YOU Would Do if You Could

Help It Liberally That It May Bring Strength and Happiness to the Men Who Are Fighting Your War

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company.

Every time you see a line of khaki marching down the street—every time you watch a squad of bluejackets hurrying to the wharf, you say to yourself:

These are the men who are fighting for me. They will cheerfully risk their lives that this country of mine may be kept safe from a brutal invader. What can I do for them? How can I support them in their fight? How can I keep them from harm and suffering?

We mean this editorial to be an answer to that question, which in one form of words or another rises to the lips of every patriotic American.

You can do a great deal for these men who are fighting for you. You can give them cheer and comfort on the way to the front—you can ease their pain if they shall be wounded—you can quickly help them back to health and strength.

If they shall be taken prisoner you can still watch over them, and see that they are fed, in an enemy country where food is very, very hard to get.

And while they are in camp in a strange country, you can surround them with cheerful influences and moral support, and teach them that in the service of their country they cannot go so far as to be out of reach of their friends at home.

And you can do all this very easily.

A wonderful organization has been effected in this country to do the work for you.

It does it quietly, efficiently and successfully.

It has had a part in earlier wars, but never has it been able to do so much as it is doing today.

That organization is the American Red Cross.

Next to our great army and navy it is the most wonderful of all American institutions.

It has thousands of men and women in its service, all of them highly trained—all of them working for their country at great personal sacrifice.

For example, W. B. Thompson, one of the ablest men of affairs in the country, went to Russia to serve the Red Cross, and is now at work helping to raise money for it among the corporations of the country.

Henry P. Davison, the eminent banker, is at the head of the organization.

Both at home and abroad, it numbers the most prominent men and women of the country in its ranks.

And every one of them is working day and night, toiling devotedly to do all that can be done for the soldiers and the sailors and marines who have gone to bring victory home from France.

Compared to the work these people are doing, yours may seem unimportant. But it is not.

The Red Cross cannot exist without money, and without a great deal of money.

You must help to contribute that money.

Just now there is a Red Cross drive for a hundred million dollars.

That sum ought to be vastly exceeded. It will if you will do as some of the Red Cross supporters ask you to do—think how much you can afford to give and then double it.

There is no question of money in this war save the question of how much money will be needed to win it.

Should we not win, your money would be of no value whatever.

And you who stay at home, while the others fight, it is your business to give, at whatever sacrifice, to this noble work.

The next time you see a line of marching men, think of them when they are overseas, or on the firing line.

Think how willingly you would serve them if you found them wounded or in need.

Think how gladly you would give them your time, your care, just to show in some small degree how much you appreciate what they have done for you

---

Then measure, as far as such a thing can be measured, that desire to serve in money.

If you do that you will give more than you expected to give—though not more than you can afford—for we all of us can afford to give our last cent to the army and navy if need be.

Look at the matter in this light, and this big drive will be a big success, and the Red Cross, which is the ministering angel of this war-ridden world, will be able greatly to extend its work, and vastly to enlarge its helpfulness to the men who wear the uniform of America.

WRITING TO YOUR BOY IN CAMP

Mothers, don't write sorrowful letters to your boys in training camps or across the water.

Don't tell them how much you miss them at home; how you have longed to hear from them and how much you have wished they were home on certain days when you cooked the favorite dish which you know they must miss now.

Do not tell them not to be reckless in discharge of duty, meaning you want them to avoid danger if possible. In other words, don't ask them to avoid chances which some other mother's son must take.

Don't ask them to write about hardships they may have to endure and then sympathize with them, for this will cause them to think more about such experiences than they should.

Write cheerful, brave letters to your boy.

You are proud of him. Say so.

Write as if you expect them all home when they have done their part.

Tell the boys how much you and their friends admire their bravery. Inspire your own boy to do noble deeds.

No real mother wants a slacker nor a shirk for a son. Tell him so.

MRS. WILSON WOODROW'S ARTICLE

Hurry-Worries Is Not a New Disease by Any Means, Although Few Ever Heard It Called So Justly Before—It Is Curable, and When the Convalescent Period Has Passed and the Patient Has Become a Quietist the World Looks Better and So Does "She"

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

THIS is a true story, not in the least exaggerated; and it is about some one you know as well as I do—the Woman Always in a Hurry.

Maybe it's yourself.

She had come in town for the day, supposedly to enjoy herself, and she was armed with a long shopping list. Although it was early, she was in a fidget until we got off. I glanced over the list.

"We ought to get this finished up in about an hour," I said.

She looked dismayed.

"Oh, less than that!" she cried. "I couldn't possibly give an hour to it. I have such a lot of other things that must be done."

Rattle-Brained

We hurried through a big department store. Veils came first on the list. She looked over the selection before her, questioned the saleswoman, and just as I thought she was going to make up her mind which she wanted, she exclaimed:

"Oh, I must get my gloves! I can't stop to decide on these veils now. I'll come back later."

We had just reached the glove department, when she paused indecisively and said:

"I believe I'd save time if I bought my blouses first."

We dashed off to the waist department. There she had difficulty in making up her mind which waist she preferred, and suddenly remembered table linen.

Then, in the middle of the salesman's discourse on the various qualities of linens, she thought of curtains.

Finally, after flying up and down in the elevator, she turned to me and said firmly, and I thought a little accusingly:

"Now, listen to me. The only way to do a thing is to go about it methodically. We'll make a fresh start. I will go back and get my veils, and then the gloves, and then the blouses, and keep on right through the list."

But, alas, it was the same thing over. She never started to buy one thing that she didn't feel the pull of another and yield to it. The result of the whole scramble was that we spent two hours and a half in accomplishing what might have been done in less than one.

She couldn't enjoy her luncheon because she was thinking of the things we'd forgotten to do in the morning and the things she wanted to do in the afternoon. There was no such word as "now" in her vocabulary.

We went to a matinee. I found out for her the exact time at which the final curtain went down. She had still ample time after that to catch her train.

"Now," I thought, "she will relax and enjoy herself and let me do the same."

Far from it. Her mind was on that train. She whispered to me every few minutes to know if I was quite sure about the time.

When I finally saw the last of her I slumped down in the taxi—"slumped" is the only word—and murmured: "The hours that I have spent with thee, dear heart, are as a string of tacks to me!" It gives me a slight vertigo now simply to recall that day. And the whole dizzy scene reminds me of one of those speeded-up motion pictures where the people fly along the ground and the taxis go zigzagging recklessly through the trees and about vast buildings in a second of time.

She was as thin as a rail, with a tense, strained expression, and her hair was getting gray before it ought to, and she had all sorts of fine, little wrinkles that her age did not warrant, and her voice was jerky and uneven. She told me that her health was not very good, she slept badly and was constantly losing weight. The doctor couldn't tell just what was the matter with her; he had prescribed medicine and change, but neither had done her any good.

A New Disease

I am not a doctor, but I knew what was the matter with her. She had the hurry-worries.

It's a preventable disease. It is also curable. The patient invariably has the idea that unless she is hurrying and scurrying every minute like a frightened rabbit the end of the world is coming. The cure is difficult, but unfailing. If she—it is usually a "she"—can be induced to turn and face the end of the world, look it in the eye, so to speak, and then say resolutely: "All right, come along. I don't care!" she is already started on the way toward recovery.

I know a woman who says she tried this method. She says she was in a state where she was worrying herself fit over trifles. But persistently she said: "I don't care! I don't care!" and tried genuinely to feel utterly indifferent to the worst that could happen to her. She insists now that if they told her the house was on fire she would wait for the firemen to come and rescue her before she would scurry to make her own escape. She has also gained many pounds.

As a quietist, she may have gone to one extreme; but she is certainly a more agreeable companion than the first lady who has gone to the other.

PRESIDENT PREDICTED RUSSIAN SITUATION

State Department advices indicate that the old group of Russian anarchists are following the suggestion of Mme. Katherine Breshkovskaya that Russia's salvation depended upon education. At the time this "Mother of Russian Revolution" came back from years of exile in Siberia she cabled an appreciation of the President's stand toward Russia. President Wilson cabled her the following significant message:

"It has afforded me genuine pleasure to receive your eloquent message. At this hour, when the historic events of the last few months have brought Russia into such close touch with America, it is most heartening to witness the courage with which the new Russia faces the problems of the future, especially when the high mission of national enlightenment and preparedness for the great duties which fall upon a civic democracy is advanced and sustained by such an educational organization as yours.

"We of America long since learned that intellectual development and moral fitness are the most powerful elements of national advancement. As the individual is the type of the nation, so the nation should embody the highest individual ideals of civic perfection in order to assert and maintain its honorable position in the world-family of commonwealths, fulfilling its material and moral duties toward its neighbors, strong in the might of right and fearless in the cause of truth and justice.

"In the effort to attain this goal, may awakened Russia and enfranchised America advance side by side with mutual affection and confident trust."

MRS. WILCOX WRITES

On Cheering Our Wounded Convalescent American Soldiers Who Have Been Maimed for Life and Crave the Solace of a Smoke in Vain, While Yankee Women Idle Near Their Hospital Puffing Away in Luxury.

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

(The Famous Poetess, Now Doing War Work in France.)

PARIS, May 1.

I HAVE just returned from a visit to an American hospital where three American boys are lying on convalescent beds with the French Cross of Honor pinned to their pillows, and I am moved to write about them.

Two of the boys, nineteen years old, have injured legs, but both will recover the full use of their limbs, so the surgeons declare. The third boy (twenty-one this month) has lost one leg above the knee. His name is Arthur B. Belanger and he comes from Brunswick, Me. His cross was received for courageous fighting at the front, where he was struck by a shell.

By his side in the battle was James Morrison Faulkner, of Keene, N. H., a nineteen-year-old lad, who, seeing his comrade fall, seized him in his arms and carried him out of the immediate danger zone, as he believed, but before he finished his daring task he was struck on the leg by a shell.

Both boys were saved, however, and after two weeks in a French hospital were brought to the American refuge, where they are rapidly coming back to health. On the cot next to young Faulkner lies Arthur Knockenhauer, of the Bronx. The bravery which this young man showed in battle and which caused his serious but not dangerous wound, brought him also the Cross of Honor. Just across the room lies another wounded American youth, Milton Barrett, of Revere, Mass. His exploits were most dramatic and thrilling, and if he had chanced to be fighting among the French soldiers he, too, no doubt would be wearing the Cross of Honor.

This young man's wounds will soon be healed and he is eager to be at the front. "It would break my heart," he said, "if I had to go back home before everybody goes. You have no idea of the fascination of the dangerous duties we encounter." These four boys all show evidences of good blood and good breeding. Clear cut, handsome young fellows, distinctly American in type. Though Arthur Knockenhauer's grandfather was born in Germany, his grandson's record and French Cross of Honor prove how thoroughly American the boy is.

In the Other Wards

In another ward of this same hospital there are sick men whose condition appeals more to one's sympathies than does that of our decorated heroes. These sick men have never been at the front and never may be. They have been dying duly of all kinds, however, which has made it possible for the armies to proceed to the front. It has been said that it requires five men, far from the fighting line, to keep the machinery of war going for each soldier who is clothed and fed and prepared for the exigencies of war.

We hear much of "camouflage" in this war; but only those who are here in France can realize the enormous amount of work connected with the creating and packing and shipping and adjusting of the camouflage paraphernalia. Many of the sick men mentioned above contracted serious illnesses in exposure to cold rains and muddy fields while working in this department. Pneumonia, hernia, appendicitis and accidents have placed them in the hospital. Some of them will be restored to health and go on to the front; others will not be able to do more than light duties, and still others will be sent home.

When they go home, they must be regarded with just as much honor as the scarred warriors.

There are many duties which seem small and insignificant to our American soldiers, yet they have to be done to keep war's machinery moving.

Among all the sick and wounded men visited in several hospitals I have seen most amazing optimism and radiant good spirits.

The wonderful poise and fine bearing of our American soldiers is most striking. General Pershing himself (whom it was my good fortune to meet and talk with personally) has no finer deportment than the majority of these American boys of ours.

No other one of the allied nations can make such a showing of so many splendid young fellows, or so it seems to me. In the American Hospital, where our Cross of Honor boys are convalescing, there are a number of German prisoners who are given all sorts of work to do—cleaning, repairing and cementing, and other duties connected with the transforming of an old school building into a modern hospital with every convenience.

These prisoners are given the same food and comforts which the other hospital attendants enjoy. All the boys are, as a rule, fond of a smoke; it helps them in the trenches. We who have battled against the smoking habit in times of peace and tried to lead our boys away from it cannot begrudge them this small indulgence in their present situation.

Selfish Women

It seems, therefore, a sad commentary on the thoughtlessness of American women that their own indulgence in this habit is making it difficult for the soldiers to obtain the weed. American women who are giving up all kinds of luxuries in the way of dress and pleasure, and who are working in every other way to help the allied soldiers, are still taking from them this one solace.

One young man showed me with great pleasure a box of cigarettes which the Y. M. C. A. chaplain had given him, the first he had had in five days. But I had seen a score of American women puffing away every day of that five. That is the only sign of selfishness I have observed in American women over here.

Just what our country is doing for war-riddled Europe now, just what it has done in one year, is almost unbelievable. One has to be in the midst of it to grasp the immensity and the importance of it all. On us depends now the result which will be victory for the human race. Without us, that victory could not be.

It will be, and it is near.

TO THE KHAKI MEN BEHIND THE FRONT.

Oh it isn't just the men who face the guns,
Not the fighters at the front alone today
Who will bring the longed for close to the bloody fray, for those
Could not carry on that fray without the ones
Who are working at war's problems far away.

You are all our splendid heroes in the strife,
And we class you with the warriors maimed and scarred,
Though you never have been near enough the battle din to hear
While you labored in the dull routine of life.
In your khaki suits with sleeves that are not barred,

You have offered up yourselves to save the world;
You have felt the abnegation of the Christ;
And whatever work you do is a brave work and a true,
Though it be not done with banners all unfurled,
You will find in sight of God it has sufficed.

While you carry back no medals when you go,
Not without you had the fighters borne war's brunt;
So just lift your heads uncowed, for your country will be proud
And its lasting love and honor will bestow
On the khaki boys who were not at the Front,
